1. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE CROSS.—By direction of the President, under the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Cross for extraordinary heroism in action against an enemy during the periods indicated is awarded posthumously to the following-named officers:

First Lieutenant Marinus Bruinooge, Infantry, United States Army, as platoon leader of the 2d Platoon, Company G, 7th Cavalry Regiment, distinguished himself by extraordinary heroism in action against an armed enemy of the United Nations near Konjiam-ni, Korea, on 14 February 1951. Committed to attack and secure commanding terrain tenaciously defended by a well-fortified hostile force, Lieutenant Bruinooge's platoon was pinned down within 150 yards of its objective by intense automatic-weapons, small-arms, and mortar fire and suffered numerous casualties. After artillery and mortar fire had been placed on the enemy position, he again led his men forward, but was halted by a vicious barrage of fire from two machine guns and an emplacement employing grenades. Making a one-man assault at approximately 1800 hours, he advanced within 20 yards and was wounded, but gallantly forged on and, after lobbing a grenade into the position, closed with the enemy and killed its four occupants. Observing the nearest machine gun was but 25 yards distant, Lieutenant Bruinooge harassed the gunners with grenades and then, fearlessly rushing forward, fired his carbine full automatic into the fox hole until he was mortally wounded. His intrepid actions retarded the onslaught, enabled evacuation of the wounded, and contributed significantly to the subsequent accomplishment of the mission. Lieutenant Bruinooge's consummate valor and willing self-sacrifice reflect the highest credit on himself and uphold the finest traditions of the military service.

First Lieutenant Robert G. Schmitt, Infantry, United States Army, a member of Company M, 31st Infantry Regiment, distinguished himself by extraordinary heroism in action against an armed enemy of the United Nations near the Chosin Reservoir, Korea, on 1 December 1950. The regiment was assigned the mission of effecting a withdrawal and attempting a juncture with the 1st Marine Division at Hagaru-ri. Following assembly of a motor convoy with Company M committed to provide security for the right flank, Lieutenant Schmitt, having sustained a severe leg injury in a previous encounter, was ordered to ride in a vehicle with other wounded. After proceeding several miles, the column was halted by a road block, and devastating fire rained down from strongly fortified positions emplaced on three surrounding hills. With mounting casualties and fast dwindling ammunition, the morale of the men was badly shaken. Lieutenant Schmitt, although suffering greatly from his wound, voluntarily left his transportation to rally, organize, and lead an assault against the enemy positions. Giving his carbine to an unarmed man and improvising a stick for a crutch, he struggled forward, and the men, rising to the challenge of their valiant leader, followed him in a determined attack against the fanatical foe.

Progressing with extreme difficulty on his makeshift crutch, he continued to lead the attack through withering fire until he was struck by a machine-gun bullet and fell mortally wounded. Refusing medical treatment, he urged the men to press the assault. Inspired by his incredible display of valor, his resolute soldiers charged with such ferocity that hostile positions were overrun and the enemy routed from the hill. Lieutenant Schmitt's intrepid actions resulted in the elimination of the road block and enabled the convoy to resume its advance. His unflinching courage and consummate devotion to duty reflect lasting glory on himself and are in keeping with the noble traditions of the military service.

Captain Conrado D. Yap, , Coast Artillery Corps, Philippine Army, distinguished himself by extraordinary heroism in connection with military operations against an armed enemy as commanding officer of Tank (Special Weapons) Company, 10th Battalion Combat Team, Philippine Expeditionary Forces to Korea, near Yultong, Korea, on 22 and 23 April 1951. Shortly before midnight on 22 April, his company, occupying defensive positions, came under a vicious, hostile attack which seriously penetrated the perimeter. Exploiting the breach, the enemy launched successive, determined assaults throughout the night. Constantly exposed to machine-gun, mortar, and artillery fire, Captain Yap crawled from fox hole to fox hole, steadying his men and encouraging them to hold firm. Learning that his 1st Platoon had been overrun, and despite orders from his battalion commander to withdraw his unit, he fearlessly led a daring charge in a determined effort to reach the beleaguered platoon. Overwhelming enemy strength and heavy fire received from flanks and to the front notwithstanding, they relentlessly pressed the assault, regained the hill, evacuated the casualties, and rescued the isolated unit. Observing a stricken soldier on the slope of the hill, Captain Yap immediately started toward the man but was mortally wounded by a burst of enemy fire. Inspired by his heroic conduct, his men continued the fight with such determination and skill that the enemy attack was contained and numerous casualties were inflicted. Captain Yap's display of courage, devotion to duty, and inspiring leadership reflect the highest credit on himself and the Army of the Republic of the Philippines.

II. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE CROSS.—By direction of the President, under the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Cross for extraordinary heroism in action against an enemy during the periods indicated is awarded to the following-named officers and enlisted man:

Master Sergeant Jimmie Holloway (Service No.), Artillery, United States Army, a member of Battery A, 15th Field Artillery Battalion, 2d Infantry Division, distinguished himself by extraordinary heroism in action against an armed enemy near Saemal and Changhong-ni, Korea, on 12 February 1951. The beleaguered battalion, heavily engaged against a numerically superior foe, was attempting to effect a withdrawal and Sergeant Holloway, constantly vulnerable to hostile fire, directed the defense and retrograde action of his battery. Learning that a wounded soldier had not been evacuated from the area just vacated, he dashed approximately 150 yards across open, fire-swept terrain to rescue him. Later, as the battalion proceeded to move back, it was halted by a road block and came under vicious fire. In the ensuing action, a mortar burst ignited one of the ammunition trucks. Sergeant Holloway, braving a withering barrage of fire, directed removal of the ammunition from the burning vehicle and then pushed it off the road. As enemy fire increased in volume and intensity, forcing the battalion into hasty defensive positions, he again raced through devastating fire and, uncoupling a howitzer from a truck, placed protective fire on a hill to enable a company of infantry to effect a withdrawal. After the executive officer was wounded and unable to respond to a call for artillery fire, Sergeant Holloway rushed forward to an exposed vantage point and, with mortar fire bursting within 15 yards, fearlessly directed deadly accurate fire into the opposing force. Upon orders to secure commanding terrain and establish defensive positions for the night, he volunteered to act as point for the combat patrol and was last seen moving up high ground toward the enemy. Sergeant Holloway's inspirational conduct, intrepid actions, and consummate devotion to duty reflect the highest credit on himself and uphold the honored traditions of the military service.

Captain Wiley McGarity, _____ (then first lieutenant), Infantry, United States Army, a member of Company F, 17th Infantry Regiment, distinguished himself by extraordinary heroism in action against an armed enemy of the United Nations near Paengma-gol, Korea, on 1 September 1951. Company F, in defensive positions on a strategic hill, was viciously attacked at approximately 0200 hours by an estimated 300 ruthless, hostile force supported by automatic-weapons and grenade fire. After the enemy penetrated a company position on the west end of the hill, inflicting heavy casualties and gaining control of key terrain, Captain McGarity, armed only with a pistol and several grenades, braved withering small-arms and automatic-weapons fire and, launching a lone-man assault against the fanatical assailants, killed approximately six hostile soldiers before his ammunition was expended. Although wounded by grenade fragments, Captain McGarity grabbed abandoned enemy grenades and a discarded carbine and continued to pour deadly accurate fire into enemy positions until the ammunition was exhausted. Then, seizing an entrenching tool, he closed in hand-to-hand combat, killing two more hostile soldiers. Maintaining his magnificent stand, Captain McGarity inflicted such sweeping destruction that the enemy broke off the engagement and when friendly troops reached the area, he was hurling grenades at the retreating foe. Captain McGarity's inspirational, intrepid actions exacted a toll of approximately 30 enemy dead and as a result of his incredible display of valor the vital strong point was resecured. His unflinching courage under fire and consummate devotion to duty reflect the highest credit on himself and uphold the honored traditions of the military service.

Captain Charles L. Wesolowsky, _____, Infantry, United States Army, a member of the United States Military Advisory Group to the Republic of Korea, distinguished himself by extraordinary heroism in action against the enemy in Korea on 20 May 1951. He was one of a group of United Nations personnel attempting to evade capture when they were suddenly subjected to heavy enemy fire which caused the withdrawal of the group. Captain Wesolowsky and two companions remained in position and furnished covering fire. During this action, he fearlessly left his sheltered position to go to the aid of a companion who was pinned down by heavy automatic-weapons fire. Charging the enemy in a fierce, bold attack, he bayoneted the gunner and one other enemy soldier and forced the remaining enemy troops to disperse, thereby preventing the over-running of the position. After enemy fire had momentarily subsided, he ordered his two companions to withdraw to safety while he, remaining behind with a critically limited supply of ammunition, covered their withdrawal, fought off enemy patrols, and continued to destroy as many of the enemy as possible. Despite malnutrition and extreme fatigue from his arduous days behind enemy lines, Captain Wesolowsky displayed superb courage against heavy odds in knowingly risking his life to allow his companions to escape unharmed. Captain Wesolowsky's heroic action and willing self-sacrifice reflect the highest credit on himself and uphold the esteemed traditions of the military service.

IV. SILVER STAR.—By direction of the President, under the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Silver Star for gallantry in action during the periods indicated is awarded to the following-named officers:

Second Lieutenant Albert L. Allen, Jr. (then sergeant), Army of the United States, a member of Company C, 192d Tank Battalion, displayed gallantry in action on or about 27 December 1941 during the withdrawal of troops from Luzon to Bataan. Lieutenant Allen, dispatched by motorcycle from a forward command post of his battalion, was en route to deliver an urgent and important message to his company commander when he was strafed by a Japanese airplane which made effective hits on both tires and the oil tank of his vehicle. Despite the damaged condition of his motorcycle, he continued forward through a Japanese ambush, in which he was wounded, and completed his important mission by delivering the message to his company command tank commander. Lieutenant Allen's determined and courageous actions reflect the highest credit on himself and are in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service.

Colonel Henri Dumoncel (then lieutenant colonel), Artillery, Army of the Republic of France, as temporary commanding officer of the French Ground Forces of the United Nations, displayed gallantry in action against an armed enemy in Korea from 7 January to 31 May 1951. During the successive battles at Wonju, he was constantly in the thick of battle at the most forward elements of his forces, directing fire support and centering accurate artillery fire on the strong enemy fortifications. His superior direction of supporting fires was a major contributing factor to the success of friendly forces at Wonju. Again at Twin Tunnels, Chipyong-ni, his display of personal courage and heroic leadership was a source of great inspiration and encouragement to all who served under him and spurred the men of his command to take their objectives at any cost. He gave impetus to the French Forces in the attack on the heavily defended Hill 1037, in the offensive actions which took place from Munbang-Ni to Pass 255, from Pass 255 to Umyang-ni to Inje. During a unit exercise under assumed combat conditions, he observed a tank moving at a rapid speed toward one of his comrades in arms who was unaware of the tank's approach. Private Cardenas, without regard for his life, rushed out in front of the onrushing tank to attract the attention of its commander. He then attempted to drag his fellow soldier from the path of the tank. By his quick thinking, gallantry, and determination, he succeeded in halting the tank in sufficient time to prevent critical injury to his comrade. Sergeant Lawrence K. Lustig (Service No.) (then corporal), Infantry, United States Army, a member of Company D, 364th Infantry Regiment, distinguished himself by heroism at Fort Dix, New Jersey, on 26 May 1951. While engaged as an instructor on a hand-grenade range, one of his students pulled the pin from a grenade and accidentally let it drop to the ground. Sergeant Lustig heard the fuse go off and turned and saw his comrade standing with the activated grenade at his feet. With complete disregard for his personal safety, he threw the student to the ground and dropped down in front of him, thereby receiving the full blast of the grenade. As the result, he received multiple injuries and his fellow soldier received only minor injuries. Sergeant Lustig's alert and courageous action in the face of grave danger saved his comrade from serious injury or possible death and reflects distinct credit on himself and the military service.

First Lieutenant James L. Cadigan (then second lieutenant), Infantry, Army of the United States, a member of Company C, 20th Armored Infantry Battalion, 10th Armored Division, distinguished himself by heroic conduct near Zerf, Germany, on 26 February 1945. His company was advancing against well-concealed enemy positions when leading assault elements were pinned down by heavy small-arms and machine-gun fire. Enemy elements, continuing their withering fire and using grenades, attempted to overrun the forward friendly positions. Lieutenant Cadigan, recognizing the critical position of advanced elements of his company, which were hopelessly pinned down, grabbed a light machine gun and crawled forward alone from his position in rear of the company through heavy enemy fire to a forward position of vantage from which he could bring fire on the enemy. He silenced one enemy machine gun and killed or wounded many of the enemy who attempted to infiltrate the company position. The remaining enemy troops fled and became disorganized, thereby permitting friendly troops to evacuate the wounded, withdraw, and reorganize. Lieutenant Cadigan's company then continued its advance. Lieutenant Cadigan's courage and devotion to duty reflect distinct credit on himself and the military service.

Leslie M. Ray, American Red Cross field director, serving with the 15th Infantry regiment, United States Army, distinguished himself by heroic conduct in action near Seoul, Korea, on 3 March 1951. Displaying sympathetic understanding and consummate concern for the mental and physical well-being of the combat soldier, Mr. Ray selflessly braved withering hostile fire to locate seven enlisted men with advance elements deployed along the Han River to deliver messages of critical morale nature. Through his efforts, a link was established between them and their families, which relieved the strain and uncertainty created by emotional upsets involving personal problems and difficulties. Mr. Ray's unflinching courage and devotion to duty were highly inspirational, en-

Major Ford proceeded beyond friendly lines under sporadic hostile fire, heedless of his own safety, to locate an enemy tank reported in the area which was holding up the advance of his unit. He located an enemy 75-mm self-propelled gun, returned to his tank destroyer, and, with great determination, led it into position from which this hostile weapon was destroyed. He then continued forward on foot ahead of leading elements of the attack echelon and located a second 75-mm self-propelled gun with its supporting enemy troops. He successfully directed one of his tank destroyers in a frontal attack to a firing position from which this enemy weapon was left in flames. Major Ford's courageous actions and outstanding leadership were an inspiration to his men and reflect great credit on himself and the military service.
