I. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE CROSS.—By direction of the President, under the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Cross for extraordinary heroism in action against an enemy on the dates indicated is awarded posthumously to the following-named officer and enlisted men:

Second Lieutenant Chung Nak Koo, Republic of Korea Army, a member of the 11th Company, 28th Regiment, 9th Republic of Korea Infantry Division, distinguished himself by extraordinary heroism in action against the enemy in the vicinity of Chorwon, Korea, on 13 October 1952. His platoon was ordered to retake the outpost ridge line on Hill 395. The enemy was well-entrenched and capable of directing accurate and devastating artillery, mortar, and automatic-weapons fire. When the platoon moved out to attack, it was pinned down by intense enemy fire. Lieutenant Chung continued forward and three men, so inspired by his courage, followed him. Despite increasing volume of hostile fire, he continued his advance to the machine-gun bunker, hurled hand grenades into the position, and silenced the gun. During this action, Lieutenant Chung lost his life. Members of the platoon, so inspired by his courage, immediately assaulted the position, successfully accomplished the mission of the unit, and inflicted heavy losses on the enemy. The extraordinary heroism and complete selfless devotion to duty displayed by Lieutenant Chung reflect great credit on himself and the Republic of Korea Army.

Private Iohiro R. Miyasaki (Service No. _____), Infantry, Army of the United States, a member of Company K, 180th Infantry Regiment, 45th Infantry Division, distinguished himself by extraordinary heroism in action against the enemy near Tummyong-dong, Korea, on 12 June 1952. While accompanying his platoon on a mission to clear the area between Hills 183 and 191, an automatic rifleman was wounded early in the action and Private Miyasaki immediately secured the automatic weapon and continued forward with the unit through heavy mortar, artillery, and automatic-weapons fire. He was wounded during this action, but refused evacuation or emergency treatment and pushed rapidly ahead, killing an estimated five of the enemy. The hostile troops fell back under the fury of the attack until they reached a small knoll defended from a bunker by six enemy soldiers armed with automatic weapons and grenades. The platoon's advance was halted here until Private Miyasaki rushed the strong point, killing at least four of the defending foe. The platoon then occupied the position as the enemy retreated. Hostile units regrouped and launched a determined counterattack. Despite wounds he had received, Private Miyasaki gallantly withstood repeated assaults on his position, repulsing the foe with heavy losses. During this action, he lost his life. Private Miyasaki's heroic actions, outstanding courage, and tenacious devotion to duty reflect the greatest credit on himself and uphold the finest traditions of the military service.

Corporal James B. Nehowig (Service No. _____), Infantry, United States Army, a member of Company G, 38th Infantry Regiment, 2d Infantry Division, distinguished himself by extraordinary heroism in action against the enemy near Tap-tong-ni, Korea, on 20 September 1952. Spearheading an assault to secure "Old Baldy," he led his squad up a barren, rocky approach toward the objective. As the valiant soldiers attacked through the narrow communication trenches, they came under intense hostile fire. Corporal Nehowig moved forward throwing grenades and firing his carbine with deadly accuracy. He destroyed five enemy bunkers and the manning crews. Reaching the military crest of the hill, he ordered his men to ready defensive positions for imminent counterattack. He then moved out to reconnoiter the forward slope of the hill. Encountering the enemy, he engaged and killed four and dispersed the remainder. Ignoring wounds sustained in this action, Corporal Nehowig made his way back to the friendly perimeter, alerted his platoon leader of the impending attack, and, returning down the forward slope, assumed a firing position to stem the assault. Maintaining his stand, he poured crippling fire into the ranks of the foe and engaged the enemy in hand-to-hand combat as they closed in on his position. Although mortally wounded in this encounter, his courageous actions contributed greatly to retarding the onslaught and, after the attack was repulsed, many enemy dead were found in the wake of his action. Corporal Nehowig's supreme sacrifice and consummate devotion to duty reflect the highest credit on himself and are in keeping with the finest traditions of the military service.

Private Aivars K. Salenieks (Service No. _____), Infantry, United States Army, a member of Company L, 279th Infantry Regiment, 45th Infantry Division, distinguished himself by extraordinary heroism in action against the enemy near Ku-Dong, Korea, on 18 October 1952. He was a member of a squad occupying a position on the main line of resistance. Shortly after midnight, friendly forces were subjected to an intense and accurate barrage of enemy artillery and mortar fire and a company of hostile troops stormed the position. Two friendly gun emplacements were neutralized by the heavy fire and the enemy overran one of the trenches, isolating Private Salenieks and four comrades from the rest of the company. In the ensuing action, he directed accurate rifle fire at the enemy troops approaching from the rear while his comrades warded off a frontal attack. After he had killed two of the charging foe and wounded several others, the enemy hurled a grenade into their bunker and Private Salenieks lost his life when the grenade exploded. Private Salenieks' indomitable courage and devotion to duty reflect the highest credit on himself and uphold the finest traditions of the military service.

Private William A. Vander Voort (Service No. _____), Infantry, United States Army, a member of Company C, 5th Infantry Regiment, 25th Infantry Division, distinguished himself by extraordinary heroism in action against the enemy near Taejon-ni, Korea, on 12 August 1950. While participating in the defense of a strategic terrain feature, his company became engaged in heavy fighting, repulsing a series of attacks launched against the positions by a determined enemy. During this action and while repeatedly exposing himself to enemy fire, Private Vander Voort was wounded. He was placed in a fox hole for protection against enemy fire and to receive medical treatment. Launching a concerted attack on the company positions a short time later, the enemy lobbed a hand grenade into the emplacement occupied by Private Vander Voort and an aidman. As the result of the explosion of the grenade, he lost his life when his body absorbed its full blast. Private Vander Voort's display of courage, devotion to duty, and inspirational conduct reflect the greatest credit on himself and are in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service.

Sergeant First Class Stanley O. Merrill (Service No.) (then sergeant), Infantry, Army of the United States, a member of the 3d Platoon, Company B, 38th Infantry Regiment, 2d Infantry Division, distinguished himself by gallantry in action against the enemy near Chura-dong, Korea, on 18 and 19 September 1952. The 3d Platoon, mounted on tanks, moved forward to join the 2d Platoon in a coordinated attack on "Old Baldy." Arriving within 250 yards of the objective, the troops learned that the 2d Platoon had been ambushed and suffered numerous casualties. The platoon dismounted and medical aid was summoned. Fully aware of the odds against him, Sergeant Merrill advanced along the open road through heavy artillery, mortar, and small-arms fire to provide security for the wounded. Firing his rifle and throwing grenades with deadly accuracy, he silenced six hostile machine guns and, although knocked to the ground several times by enemy mortar blasts, maintained his position until all casualties were removed. Despite rapidly increasing mortar fire, he voluntarily remained behind to cover the withdrawal of friendly forces. Finally falling back, he found a wounded man and carried him approximately 300 yards down the fire-swept road to safety. Sergeant Merrill's courageous actions, tenacity, and devotion to duty reflect great credit on himself and the military service.

First Lieutenant Constantine Demetrios Tombras, Greek Expeditionary Forces, distinguished himself by gallantry in action against the enemy in the vicinity of Koyangdae, Korea, on 2 March 1952. Leading a group of seven men in an attack against a series of heavily fortified enemy bunkers located on top of Kelly Hill, Lieutenant Tombras and his men were driven back by heavy small-arms, automatic-weapons, and artillery fire. After rallying his small group, Captain Jimmy P. Robinson, , United States Air Force, distinguished himself by heroism and extraordinary devotion to duty in aerial flight over Eniwetok Atoll on 1 November 1952. Captain Robinson, flying an F-84 aircraft at high altitude, was charged with obtaining classified data of the highest importance to the Nation. He elected to execute this difficult mission rather than return to base, even in the face of extremely adverse weather, wind, and other operational conditions. When the mission was completed, he steered his aircraft for Eniwetok Air Base with a minimum amount of fuel. He conserved his remaining fuel with utmost skill, but with Eniwetok Air Base in sight, his engine flamed out. Although advised to bail out while at sufficient altitude, Captain Robinson, disregarding his personal safety, elected to attempt to glide to the field to save the valuable data his fighter was carrying. Seeing a young girl in danger of drowning in a flood-swept stream, Colonel Brooks, with total disregard for his personal safety, jumped into the stream and held her up until they were helped from the water by the police. Since the raging water was deep and the young girl was unable to swim in the swift current, Colonel Brooks' prompt and courageous action, at the risk of his life, undoubtedly saved her life and reflects great credit on himself and the military service.

Upon a request for volunteers by the battery commander to attempt a rescue, Private Butcher unhesitatingly volunteered and immediately went on foot to the scene of the accident approximately 1 mile away. By this time, high winds and heavy breakers were breaking up the boat. The two men remaining with the boat, because of injuries, cold, dangerous undertow, and heavy seas, were clinging to the wreckage. Private Butcher, with complete disregard for his safety, waded into the sea toward the boat and aided in the recovery of one of the injured civilians who was washed overboard by a huge breaker. He then again entered the water and aided in bringing the second injured man to shore. The heroism displayed by Private Butcher reflects great credit on himself and the military service.

By this time, high winds and heavy breakers were breaking up the boat. The two men remaining with the boat, because of injuries, cold, dangerous undertow, and heavy seas, were clinging to the wreckage. Private Keith, with complete disregard for his safety, waded into the sea toward the boat and aided in the recovery of one of the injured civilians who was washed overboard by a huge breaker. He then again entered the water and aided in bringing the second injured man to shore. The heroism displayed by Private Keith reflects great credit on himself and the military service.

Lieutenant Mizer quickly organized a volunteer rescue party and immediately went on foot to the scene of the accident approximately 1 mile away. By this time, high winds and heavy breakers were breaking up the boat. The two men remaining with the boat, because of injuries, cold, dangerous undertow, and heavy seas, were clinging to the wreckage. Lieutenant Mizer, with complete disregard for his safety, waded into the sea toward the boat, leading two enlisted men who had volunteered to aid in the rescue. At this time, one of the injured civilians was washed overboard by a huge breaker but was recovered and assisted to shore. He then again led his rescue party into the water and brought the second injured man to shore. The heroism displayed by Lieutenant Mizer reflects great credit on himself and the military service.
