I. DISTINGUISHED SERVICE CROSS. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the Act of Congress approved 9 July, 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Distinguished Service Cross for extraordinary heroism in action against an enemy is awarded to the following-named officer and enlisted man:

Sergeant Mehmet Ergin, 18012, Infantry, Turkish Army, distinguished himself by extraordinary heroism in action against the enemy near Sanggorangp'o, Korea, on 28–29 May 1953. His unit was dispatched to reinforce Outpost Vegas, which was under heavy enemy attack. Upon arrival he found the strength of friendly forces depleted and the enemy holding a portion of the position. Organizing his forces, he led them through heavy artillery, mortar and small arms fire in a valiant counterattack which drove the enemy back several hundred meters. When the enemy launched a counterattack against the newly won positions, he successfully met the attack and stopped the enemy's advance, forcing their withdrawal. With complete disregard for personal safety he moved from one position to another encouraging his men despite heavy barrages of artillery and mortar fire. Later, using grenades and any weapon at his disposal, he led his unit forward again in counterattack, which succeeded in driving the enemy from the last friendly position under their control. His actions made it possible for friendly forces to regain control of a major outpost while inflicting numerous casualties on the enemy forces. Sergeant Ergin's aggressive courage, determined devotion to duty and inspiring leadership reflect the highest credit on himself and the Turkish Army, and uphold the esteemed traditions of the military service.

Captain Sinasi Sukan, 937–7, Turkish Army, distinguished himself by extraordinary heroism near Sanggorangp'o, Korea, on 29 May 1953. He voluntarily accompanied one of his platoons ordered to reinforce Outpost Carson which was under heavy enemy attack. Upon hearing that both Outposts Carson and Elko had been surrounded he led his troops in a successful counterattack breaking through enemy lines, retaking Outpost Elko. He then quickly deployed his forces for defense, cautioning his men of the necessity of holding the position at all costs. He obtained a carbine and resupply of grenades and moved forward to an exposed position in a critical sector of the Outpost. Although exposed to a continuous devastating mortar and artillery barrage he moved constantly around the fighting positions, encouraging the men, directing fire and fighting with grenades and any weapon he could find, killing an estimated seventy-five enemy himself. After fighting continuously for 16 hours he was wounded but refused to be evacuated. Captain Sukan's inspirational leadership, heroic actions and consummate devotion to duty reflect the highest credit on himself and the Turkish Army, and were in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service.

While participating with his platoon in an attack on "Hill M-1," Corporal Song suddenly dashed up the west side of the hill and destroyed a bunker with hand grenades, killing nine of its defenders. In eliminating this strong-point he captured a light machine gun and two submachine guns and pressed his attack on the remainder of the demoralized and fleeing enemy to inflict additional casualties. VI..SOLDIER'S MEDAL. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress, approved 2 July 1926 (WD Bul. 8, 1926) the Soldier's Medal for heroism not involving actual conflict with an enemy on the dates indicated is awarded to the following-named officers and enlisted men:

Second Lieutenant Vincent H. Allen, Jr., , Artillery, United States Army, a member of Headquarters 548th Field Artillery Battalion, distinguished himself by heroism at Lake Ozark, Missouri, on 28 May 1954. Lieutenant Allen, along with his wife and ten other passengers was aboard a motor boat after there had been heavy storms in the area on the date of the accident. The boat was about 10 minutes out from the dock when a storm struck with great fury causing the boat to capsize in some two or three hundred feet of water. Fully aware of the treacherous tide and the danger that the twisting boat might lurch against him, Lieutenant Allen dived under the capsized boat and broke open a compartment securing the life jackets. It was necessary for him to dive under the capsized boat three or four times. He would return to the surface, distribute the life jackets to those survivors still on top of the water and once again dive under the capsized boat for additional life jackets. He further assisted in aiding some of the passengers to a position on top of the capsized boat. After rendering all possible assistance at the immediate scene he advised the survivors that he was swimming ashore to get help. Shortly thereafter the storm subsided and Lieutenant Allen and his wife were picked up a few yards from shore by a rescue boat returning to the dock after picking up other survivors at the scene of the accident. Lieutenant Allen's prompt, brave, and thoughtful action was undoubtedly a major factor in saving the lives of the survivors reflecting credit on himself and the military service.

Corporal Richard E. Bohn, , Infantry, United States Army, a member of Company K, 28th Infantry Regiment, Fort Carson, Colorado, distinguished himself by heroism on 18 February 1955. While engaged in throwing live grenades as a part of regular training at Fort Carson, a soldier dropped an armed grenade. Without considering his own safety Corporal Bohn immediately picked up the grenade, threw it to a point where it exploded harmlessly, and he pulled the other soldier to a place of safety. Corporal Bohn's quick thinking, selfless exposure to certain death, and initiative reflect the highest credit on himself and his unit and are in keeping with the finest traditions of the military service.

First Lieutenant Donald L. Donner, , (then Second Lieutenant), Artillery, United States Army, a member of the 538th Field Artillery Battalion, Fort Carson, Colorado, distinguished himself by heroism at Fort Carson on 11 August 1954. Lieutenant Donner extinguished a fire in an M-48 tank at a fueling point near the battalion motor shop where a fire had started while the tank was being refueled. All efforts to put out the blaze had failed and all personnel, including the crew of the tank, had retreated to a safer distance, fearing an explosion. At this time Lieutenant Donner arrived with a CO₂ fire extinguisher, and, in the face of previous unsuccessful efforts to extinguish the blaze, and the possibility of an explosion, Lieutenant Donner, with total disregard for his life and personal safety, approached the fire and quickly put it out. This act saved the Government thousands of dollars in loss of equipment and averted possible injury to personnel in the vicinity, reflecting credit on himself and the military service.

Lieutenant Colonel William O. Fite, II, , Infantry, United States Army, a member of the 7502d Army Unit (Personnel Center), Fort Buchanan, Puerto Rico, distinguished himself by outstanding heroism in the rescue of a brother officer near Cerro Gordo, Puerto Rico on 7 November 1954. While swimming at Cerro Gordo, Puerto Rico, Lieutenant Colonel Fite observed a brother officer being knocked from a small boat by high waves and being swept into an extremely dangerous area of high, rolling breakers. Lieutenant Colonel Fite unhesitatingly, and at great personnel risk, entered the dangerous breakers and towed the injured officer to a place of quiet water and safety. Lieutenant Colonel Fite's heroic action saved the life of a brother officer at a decided risk to his own. Such action reflects the greatest credit on himself and the military service.

Private First Class David O. Mac Nichols, , Transportation Corps, United States Army, a member of the 584th Transportation Detachment (Marine Maintenance), distinguished himself by heroism at the Charleston Transportation Depot, United States Army, North Charleston, South Carolina, on 15 February 1955. At about 1600 hours, a civilian employee of the Charleston Transportation Depot, United States Army, fell into the Cooper River from the BPL 6666F on which he was working. There was a swift tide flowing, and the water temperature was approximately 45° F. Private Mac Nichol, who was in the vicinity, without hesitation, fully aware of the swift tide, and without regard for his own safety, plunged into the water fully clothed. He swam approximately 25 yards to the rescue of the civilian employee, overpowered him and swam with him to a nearby tugboat where the two men were pulled out of the water by bystanders. Private Mac Nichol's prompt and courageous action saved the man from drowning, and reflects great credit on himself and the military service.

Sergeant Jesus T. Rosario, , United States Army, a member of Battery C, 466th AAA Battalion, March Air Force Base, California, distinguished himself by heroic action on 16 September 1954. On or about 1600 hours on 16 September 1954, Sergeant Rosario, a passenger on a 5-ton truck towing a 75-mm gun was returning from Camp Irwin, California, en route to March Air Force Base. As the truck started down Cajon Pass the brakes failed. Due to inertia and the slope of the pass the truck picked up an excessive amount of speed causing the transmission of the truck to explode. Sergeant Rosario, who at the time was riding in the bed of the truck along with five other men, made his way down the tow bar of the gun and across the gun itself and applied the mechanical brakes on the rear bogie of the gun. The truck was travelling in excess of 70 miles per hour for approximately 4 miles according to a California state highway patrolman, who was attempting to clear the road for the runaway vehicle. There were turns in the road a short distance from the place the truck stopped that would have been impossible for the truck and gun to negotiate at its speed. Sergeant Rosario's action and complete disregard for his personal safety saved several lives, both military and civilian, in addition to several hundred thousand dollars of Government property reflecting credit on himself and the military service.

Private First Class Jessie T. Washington, , Armor, United States Army, a member of Company A, 30th Tank Battalion, School Troops, Fort Knox, Kentucky, distinguished himself by heroism at Fort Knox on 29 January 1955. While acting in the capacity of driver of a M-41 medium tank during a period of instruction for an armor officer basic class, Private Washington's vehicle was struck by an uncontrolled moving tank. The collision and the following rapid movements of the vehicles caused an officer passenger to lose his footing and fall towards the tread of the oncoming tank. In spite of the imminent danger of being crushed himself, Private Washington unhesitatingly, and with complete disregard for his own personal safety, pulled the stricken Lieutenant to safety. He then returned to the controls of his tank and drove it and its passengers from possible danger. Private Washington's prompt and courageous action in the face of grave danger reflects great credit on himself and the military service.

Captain Bernard H. Radoszewski, , Infantry, United States Army, a member of Company L, 9th Regiment, 2d Infantry Division, distinguished himself by heroic conduct in action near Yofu, Korea, on 14 February 1951. His company was in position several miles forward of friendly front lines with orders to hold a critical road junction when the enemy launched a determined attack with numerically superior forces. As the battle raged severe casualties were suffered, communications were out of action, important terrain was lost, and the situation was deteriorating very rapidly. Throughout the severe fighting Captain Radoszewski displayed outstanding leadership and courage. He repeatedly exposed himself to enemy fire maintaining liaison and contact between units under fire. When ammunition shortages became critical Captain Radoszewski personally secured and carried ammunition from abandoned vehicles of the Reconnaissance Company which permitted the inflicting of further heavy casualties on the attacking forces. Despite the fact that he was wounded during the action, he assisted in evacuating wounded comrades to less exposed areas. Captain Radoszewski's courage, leadership and devotion to duty reflect great credit on himself and the military service.

Captain Doyle C. Vincent, Armor (then Infantry), . Army of the United States, Headquarters Company First Battalion, 31st Infantry Regiment, 7th Infantry Division, distinguished himself by heroic achievement in action against an enemy of the United States near Untaek, Korea, on 27 November 1950. During an engagement in which his battalion was the principal friendly participant, two vehicles were abandoned in territory afterward held by the enemy. On the day following the engagement, Captain Vincent, the battalion motor officer, led a 6-man patrol nearly 20 miles into territory occupied by enemy forces with the mission of recovering these vehicles. Although repeatedly subjected to enemy harassing fire, Captain Vincent executed his mission with such personal courage, leadership, and professional competence that the recovery mission was completely successful, and two vitally needed vehicles were recovered without casualties to Captain Vincent's party.
