Sergeant Robert D. Roberts, , then Corporal, Infantry, United States Army, a member of Company G, 7th Cavalry Regiment, 1st Cavalry Division, for gallantry in action against the enemy on 7 September 1950, near Waegwan, Korea. During the night, while the company was in a retrograde movement, and had to attack to the rear to avoid being encircled, it was noticed that the Company's Commanding Officer and third and fourth platoons were missing. Since no one had any knowledge of their whereabouts, Sergeant Roberts, with selfless disregard for his own personal safety, volunteered to lead a small patrol back into the strongly infested enemy territory, in search of them. Sergeant Roberts' gallantry reflects great credit on himself and the military service.

V. SOLDIER'S MEDAL. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress, approved 2 July 1926 (WD Bul. 8, 1926) a Soldier's Medal for heroism not involving actual conflict with an enemy on the dates indicated is awarded to the following-named enlisted men:

Sergeant First Class John L. Chapman, , Armor, United States Army, a member of Headquarters and Service Company, 40th Tank Battalion, distinguished himself by heroism on 27 January 1956, in the vicinity of Hanau, Germany. The 40th Tank Battalion was proceeding to Vilseck, Germany, in a truck convoy. As the convoy stopped for a maintenance check, it was discovered that a cooking unit had caught fire in the rear of the mess truck, trapping six people inside. With admirable self-composure and with no thought of his personal safety, Sergeant Chapman picked up the blazing fire unit in his bare hands, lifted it over the tail gate of the truck, and threw it into the snow, extinguishing the fire. In the process, Sergeant Chapman's clothing caught fire. When these flames were extinguished he then directed the evacuation of the occupants of the truck to a safe place. Before the unit was removed the body of the truck had ignited and the situation was being further endangered as the flames spread rapidly toward ammunition stored in the vehicle and the gasoline tank. Anticipating an explosion, Sergeant Chapman ordered everyone away from the truck. He then climbed into the smoke-filled cab and drove the vehicle off the road a safe distance from the convoy. The smoke and heat inside the cab were so intense that he had to climb onto the running board in order to see and breathe. Sergeant Chapman's alert, prompt, and courageous action in the face of grave danger reflects great credit on himself and the military service.

Private First Class Calvin Goss, , Artillery, United States Army, a member of Service Battery, 197th Armored Field Artillery Battalion, Fort Hood, Texas, distinguished himself by heroism near Waco, Texas, on 2 March 1956. While driving along the highway on the bank of the Brazos River Private Goss was called upon by a man to rescue a small boy who had been buried under an avalanche of sand and rock. Upon arriving at the scene, a cliff 35- or 40-feet high, Private Goss leaped to the bottom. In spite of a painfully wrenched knee received in the jump he began digging with his hands to uncover the boy. As the digging progressed another side of the cliff gave evidence of imminent sliding but with utter disregard for his own safety he continued to dig until the boy was freed and taken to a place of safety. Private Goss's prompt and courageous action reflects great credit on himself and the military service.

Specialist Third Class Galen L. Luchau, , United States Army, distinguished himself by heroism near South Wolmi-Do Island, Inchon Port, Korea, on 3 October 1955. As a landing craft approached the island, a sudden jarring of the boat flung a crew member into the deep, choppy water. Realizing that the darkness of the night made immediate action imperative, Specialist Luchau unhesitatingly kicked off his shoes, plunged into the water and swam to the rescue of the unconscious man. Supporting the limp crewman, he struggled to keep afloat as the swift tide threatened to sweep them out to sea. After some minutes his calls for help attracted the attention of others in the boat who tossed him a life jacket and directed the coxswain to turn back. Specialist

Luchau's courageous and unselfish action reflects utmost credit on himself and upholds the esteemed traditions of the military service.

Specialist Third Class Charles N. Wilson, Jr., Ordnance Corps, United States Army, a member of Detachment 2, 9393d Technical Unit, White Sands Proving Ground, New Mexico, distinguished himself by heroism near El Paso, Texas on 25 March 1956. Specialist Wilson was traveling along Airport Road in an automobile with a comrade when the car had to stop abruptly to avoid collision with a plane coming off the runway. Upon observing the aircraft crashing Specialist Wilson immediately jumped from the car and ran to the scene of the accident. With utter disregard for his personal safety he unhesitatingly entered the flaming wreckage and found the pilot in flames from the waist down. Although receiving minor first degree burns on his arms and face Specialist Wilson kicked aside the flaming debris and managed to grab hold of the pilot's parachute harness and drag him to safety. His prompt and courageous action in the face of grave personal danger undoubtedly saved the pilot from certain death. The heroism and ability to act in an emergency as displayed by Specialist Wilson reflect great credit on himself and are in keeping with the finest traditions of the military service.
