IV._SOLDIER'S MEDAL. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the Act of Congress, approved 2 July 1926, a Soldier's Medal for heroism not involving actual conflict with an enemy is awarded to—

Private First Class Norman D. Backnes, Army of the United States, a member of Headquarters, 201st Logistical Command (A), United States Forces, distinguished himself by heroism on 11 August 1958, at Red Beach, Beirut, Lebanon. While swimming with members of his unit, Private Backnes heard a cry for assistance from a soldier caught in a dangerous undertow and being swept out to sea. With complete disregard for his own personal safety and despite foreknowing the danger existing in the extremely rough and choppy waves since he had assisted in a previous rescue, Private Backnes immediately went to the aid of the distressed swimmer and brought him safely into shallow waters. Upon reaching the beach he further aided in applying artificial respiration to revive the victim. Private Backucs' prompt and courageous action was instrumental in saving the life of a fellow soldier under extreme hazardous conditions, reflecting the utmost credit on himself and the military service.

Specialist Third Class Delbert T. Faw,

Transportation Corps,
United States Army, a member of the 76th Transportation Company (Medium Truck), distinguished himself by heroism near Orleans, France on 25 March 1958.
Observing an M-52 tractor and trailer-van jack-knife, skid off the highway, turn over and catch fire approximately 12 miles from Orleans, Specialist Faw immediately parked the wrecker he was driving and ran to the accident to render assistance. Upon arrival at the scene he found the overturned vehicle enveloped with flames and the injured driver trapped in the cab of the burning truck.
Without hesitation or regard for his own personal safety, he obtained a knife, slashed the canvas top of the cab and pulled the injured man from the flaming wreek. The prompt and courageous action by Specialist Faw saved the life of the trapped victim and reflects the utmost credit on himself and the military service.

Private First Class Adolph Levins, Jr., (then Private), Artillery, United States Army, a member of Battery C (105-mm) (Airborne), 321st Artillery, 101st Airborne Division, distinguished himself by heroism on 18 May 1958. After participating in an Armed Forces Day Parade at Owensboro, Kentucky, Private Levins witnessed an automobile plunge into the Ohio River. Without hesitation and at the risk of his own life from the flood-swollen river, he followed the automobile into the river, even though fully clothed to include paratrooper boots at the time, to rescue the driver of the car. Finding that he was unable to open the car door, Private Levins persisted in his efforts to rescue the driver, finally succeeding in pulling him through an open rear window just as the automobile was engulfed in thirty feet of water. With the assistance of a comrade, Private Levins towed the victom to the shore some forty yards away. His prompt and courageous action in the face of grave danger coupled with complete disregard for his own safety, reflects great credit on himself and the military service

Private First Class Raymond C. Maruschak. Artillery, United States Army, Company B, 6021 Service Unit, Fort Lewis, Washington, distinguished himself by heroism during the early morning hours of 28 August 1958. in the vicinity of the Chamberlain-Wald Airport, Minneapolis, Minnesota, when the civilian DC5B aircraft on which he was a passenger crashlanded shortly after takeoff. With the emergency exits blocked either by the ground or by flames, and with smoke and fumes starting to fill the cabin, the sixty-one passengers and crew were trapped inside the aircraft. Noticing a small hole in the fuselage where a wing had been wrenched off, Private Maruschak enlarged the hole into an exit by tearing back the raw metal with his bare hands, slashing them in so doing. Then with the flames starting to lick at the interior of the cabin, with complete disregard for his own safety, Private Maruschak stationed himself at his improvised exit and handed out the women. children, and injured. Despite the constant danger from the flames and threat of explosion, he continued his heroic action until the last of the passengers had been safely evacuated. He made his escape with only seconds to spare before flames completely engulfed the aircraft. His prompt and courageous action in the face of extreme danger reflects great credit on himself and the military service.

Master Sergeant Condic E. Myers,

United States Army a member of the United States Army Element, Military Assistance Advisory Group to Japan, distinguished himself by heroism on 5 July 1958. Upon hearing a call for help from a woman who was caught in an extremely strong current and undertow while swimming in the Pacific Ocean in the vicinity of Katakai, Chiba Prefecture, Japan, Sergeant Myers proceeded without hesitation or concern for his own personal safety to rescue her. After an exhausting swim through the vicious undertow and in high-breaking waves he managed to reach the victim and, with great difficulty, kept her affoat in the turbulent waters. Sergeant Myers supported the stricken swimmer until additional assistance arrived, exhausting all personal effort in his attempt to successfully effect the rescue. The bravery, determination, and presence of mind exhibited by Sergeant Myers in risking his life in this extremely dangerous situation reflect great credit on himself and the military service.
