III. SOLDIER'S MEDAL. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the Act of Congress, approved 2 July 1926, a Soldier's Medal for heroism not involving actual conflict with an enemy is awarded to:

Private James W. Daniels, Military Police Corps, United States Army, a member of Company "D", 728th Military Police Battalion, distinguished himself by heroism on 10 July 1959 at Kunsan, Korea. Private Daniels was patrolling the POL pipeline on Kunsan Air Base during the hours of darkness when a severe explosion occurred at the pumping station in the vicinity of his patrol. Private Daniels hastened to the scene of the blast to find the area engulfed in a rapidly spreading fire fed by high octane gasoline from a ruptured main. Hearing cries for help from the adjacent marsh area, Private Daniels, voluntarily, and with complete disregard for his own safety and the danger of intense heat, explosion, and spreading fire, waded into the gasoline covered marsh water and, with the help of a comrade, located and carried a seriously injured airman to safety. He then, with a comrade, commandeered an Air Force vehicle to assist in the evacuation of the injured man to the Base hospital. Private Daniels' unselfishness, initiative, and prompt courageous action saved the airman from possible death by drowning or fire from the spreading gasoline-fed flames, reflecting great credit on himself and the military service.

Master Sergeant Arnold J. Ferreira, Artillery, United States Army, a member of Battery B, 3d Gun Battalion (280-mm), 38th Artillery, distinguished himself by heroism on 29 August 1959 in the vicinity of Ohon Gong Ni, Korea. Sergeant Ferreira observed a group of Korean women and children running up and down the banks of the Hon Tan River and pointing excitedly toward a child floundering approximately 25 feet from shore in deep water. Without hesitation or concern for his own personal safety, Sergeant Ferreira plunged fully clad into the water and, fighting swift and swollen currents and a strong undertow, swam out to rescue the drowning child. Without assistance, he brought the young boy safely to shore, quickly administered artificial respiration which revived him and returned the child to its mother. Sergeant Ferreira's quick presence of mind, courageous actions, and selfless determination in this emergency undoubtedly saved the child's life, and reflect the utmost credit on himself and the military service.

Private First Class Howard D. Ford, Military Police Corps, United States Army, a member of Company "D", 728th Military Police Battalion, distinguished himself by heroism on 10 July 1950 at Kunsan, Korea. Private Ford was patrolling the POL pipeline on Kunsan Air Base during the hours of darkness when a severe explosion occurred at the pumping station in the vicinity of his patrol. Private Ford hastened to the scene of the blast to find the area engulfed in a rapidly spreading fire fed by high octane gasoline from a ruptured main. Hearing cries for help from the adjacent work area, Private Ford, after being warned that the marsh was covered with gas and that the flames from the pumping station were liable to spread to the marsh at any moment, voluntarily and with complete disregard for his own safety and the dangers of intense heat, explosion, and spreading fire, waded into the gasoline covered marsh water and single handedly located and carried a seriously injured airman to safety. Private Ford then assisted in the evacuation of the injured man to the Base hospital. Private Ford's unselfishness, initiative, and prompt courageous action saved the airman from possible death by drowning or fire from the spreading gasoline-fed flames, reflecting great credit on himself and the military service.

Major Charles M. Goodale, Signal Corps, United States Army, distinguished himself by heroism in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania on 14 May 1950. Major Goodale, in company with a fellow officer, was walking on a public street at midday in central Philadelphia when his companion was unsuspectingly set upon from the rear by a deranged assailant. Without any warning or provocation, the homicidal maniac, armed with a hatchet, attacked Major Goodale's comrade, striking him about the head and inflicting severe wounds. Major Goodale, completely unarmed and without regard for his own personal safety, interposed between the wounded officer and the lunatic, disengaged the weapon from the hands of the crazed man and forcibly shifted him away from the fallen officer. As soon as the immediate danger of any further attack was removed, he turned to help his companion, administered first aid and summoned assistance. Major Goodale's calm presence of mind, unselfish courage, and heroic actions in the face of this tragic incident saved his fellow officer from more serious injury or death, and reflect distinct credit on himself and the military service.

Private First Class John O. Haws, Military Police Corps, United States Army, a member of 118th United States Army Sentry Dog Detachment, distinguished himself by heroism on 10 July 1950 at Kunsan, Korea. Private Haws was patrolling the POL pipeline on Kunsan Air Base during the hours of darkness when a severe explosion occurred at the pumping station in the vicinity of his patrol. Private Haws hastened to the scene of the blast to find the area engulfed in a rapidly spreading fire fed by high octane gasoline from a ruptured main. Hearing cries for help from the adjacent marsh area, Private Haws, voluntarily, and with complete disregard for his own safety and the danger of intense heat, explosion, and spreading fire, waded into the gasoline covered marsh water and, with the help of a comrade, located and carried a seriously injured airman to safety. He then, with a comrade, commandeered an Air Force vehicle to assist in the evacuation of the injured man to the Base hospital. Private Haws's unselfishness, initiative, and prompt courageous action saved the airman from possible death by drowning or fire from the spreading gasoline-fueled flames, reflecting great credit on himself and the military service.

Specialist Five Richard W. Howard, a member of Headquarters and Service Company, 4th Medium Tank Battalion (Patton), 68th Armor, Fort Bragg, North Carolina, distinguished himself by heroism on 24 July 1959. Specialist Howard was performing duty as Tractor Vehicle Mechanic when he noticed an M-48 Tank on fire. Without hesitation or concern for his own personal safety, he picked up a fire extinguisher in the shop where he was working and, utilizing a jeep, drove to the scene of the flaming vehicle. Determining that more extinguishers were needed, he drove back to the Battalion Maintenance Shop and obtained two additional extinguishers. When he returned and found thick black smoke and fumes coming up through the tank turret, Specialist Howard, with utter disregard for his own safety, climbed down into the turret of the smoldering vehicle, removed the engine compartment access doors and fought the fire until it was extinguished. Specialist Howard's prompt courage and aggressive actions in the face of this sudden emergency saved the tank from total destruction, and reflect distinct credit on himself and the United States Army.

Sergeant First Class James E. Schneider, United States Army, a member of United States Army Recruiting Main Station, New Orleans, Louisiana, distinguished himself by heroism on 17 May 1959. Sergeant Schneider was fishing from the banks of Old River, near Merryville, Louisiana, when he was alerted by screams coming from approximately 300 yards down the shore and nearly 150 feet out and in the center of the river. A small boy had accidentally fallen overboard from a boat and was struggling in the water without the aid of a life jacket or preserver. He then observed a man jump from a nearby boat and swim toward the struggling youth. The man, in attempting to rescue the boy, became physically unable to swim, and started struggling with the child upon his back. Sergeant Schneider in observing these actions, was quick to realize the danger of the situation and immediately began running the 300 yards down the shore, kicking off his shoes while running. With complete disregard for his own personal safety, Sergeant Schneider, fully clothed, plunged into the water and swam out to the scene of the struggle and grabbed the man and boy and helped them safely back to their boat. The presence of mind, immediate and, courageous action taken by Sergeant Schneider in unselfishly risking his life in this emergency saved the man and boy from possible drowning, and reflect distinct credit on himself and the United States Army.

Captain Pierce D. Dusenberry, Infantry, United States Army, distinguished himself by heroism while on annual active duty training with Company A, 1st Battle Group, 168th Infantry, Iowa Army National Guard, on 15 August 1959. Captain Dusenberry was boating on a lake outside of Camp Ripley, Minnesota, when his companion decided to swim ashore some 30 yards from the beach. As the unskilled swimmer began to flounder in deep water, Captain Dusenberry threw him a life jacket. When this failed to reach the drowning man who had submerged once, Captain Dusenberry cut off the boat's motor and, without hesitation or concern for his own personal safety, dived in to aid the victim. Upon reaching him, the soldier grabbed Captain Dusenberry and pulled him under the surface. Captain Dusenberry managed to break the man's hold and towed him safely to shore. Captain Dusenberry's selfless and courageous efforts saved a fellow soldier from drowning, and reflect the utmost credit upon himself and the military service.

First Lieutenant Ketth L. Groom, Infantry, United States Army, a member of the 502d Aviation Company, 2d Armored Division, distinguished himself by heroism near Gatesville, Texas on 4 October 1959. While performing duty in connection with a mission to rescue three men whose small boat had capsized on the flooded Leon River, Lieutenant Groom piloted a helicopter to the scene in an effort to evacuate the stranded victims. Under hazardous conditions of prevailing floodwaters, impaired visibility and severely limited landing area, he landed the aircraft approximately 400 feet from the site and found the men marooned in a partly submerged tree. After dismounting from the helicopter, Lieutenant Groom, in company with the aircraft crew, moved through a flood-swollen, debris-filled part of the river to a point about 75 feet from the stranded party. Without concern for his own personal safety, Lieutenant Groom tied a rope around his waist and swam through the turbulent, treacherous waters to the three victims. Utilizing the rope anchored to a tree, he then rescued one of the men and returned to assist in rescuing another. The strong determination and conscientious leadership which he displayed in this emergency insured that this rescue mission was successfully effected. Lieutenant Groom's courageous and heroic actions are worthy of emulation, and reflect distinct credit upon himself and the military service.

Captain Lawrence F. McKay, Corps of Engineers, United States Army, distinguished himself by heroism on 20 December 1950, while serving as a member of the Aviation Detachment, Headquarters, United States Army, Europe. Captain McKay was performing duty as copilot of an L-28D Army aircraft which crashed near Madrid, Spain while attempting to execute a ground controlled approach landing under adverse conditions of intense fog and extremely reduced visibility. When the plane had come to rest on the ground, both engines burst into flames, endangering both his life and that of the pinned and injured pilot. Despite the fact that he was severely injured himself, and with the full knowledge that the aircraft might be enveloped by flames at any moment, Captain McKay remained inside the plane, extricated the wounded pilot and removed him from the cockpit to safety just seconds before the plane exploded. While performing duty in connection with a mission to rescue three men whose small boat had capsized on the flooded Leon River, Specialist Peele served as crew chief of a helicopter utilized to evacuate the stranded victims. Despite conditions of prevailing floodwaters, impaired visibility and severely limited landing space, the aircraft was landed some 400 feet from the site, and the men were found marooned in a partly submerged tree. After dismounting from the helicopter, Specialist Peele, in company with the aircraft crew, moved through a flood-swollen, debris-filled part of the river to a point about 75 feet from the stranded party where a rope used to construct a safety line was anchored on the bank by the crew and secured to the tree supporting the victims. Without concern for his own personal safety, Specialist Peele swam out through the turbulent, treacherous waters, rescued one of the men and returned to assist in the rescue of another. The strong determination and conscientious leadership which he displayed in this emergency insured that this rescue mission was successfully effected.
