1. SILVER STAR. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the Act of Congress, approved 9 July 1918, a Silver Star for gallantry in action is awarded to:

Captain Angelo J. Bulafas, (then First Lieutenant), Infantry, United States Army, distinguished himself by gallantry in action near Wonju, Korea, on 15-16 January 1951. As a platoon leader in Company G, 9th Infantry, Captain Balafas led a patrol ten miles through a narrow valley. Despite the fact that groups of enemy troops appeared in numerous places in the rugged mountains flanking the road threatened to on them off. Captain Balafas led a small detachment in advance of the main patrol into a minefield where an M16 half-track vehicle had been abandoned. Clearing sufficient mines to allow passage Captain Balafas drove the vehicle out under its own power. Fighting enemy forces which had increased in strength during the entire withdrawal the patrol captured several prisoners and reopened an important route. Captain Balafas' courage in exposing himself to small arms fire and mines to recover a sorely needed vehicle, his superior leadership in conducting a mission of greater scope than anticipated, and his exemplary conduct in the face of a numerically superior enemy are in the best tradition of the United States Army and reflect great credit upon himself and the military service.

Infantry, United States Army, a Sergeant Donal N. O'Callaghan, member of Company L, 38th Infantry, 2d Infantry Division, distinguished himself by gallantry in action on 13 February 1953 in North Korea. While his company was being subjected to a barrage of heavy artillery from Chinese Communist forces during a night attack, Sergeant O'Callaghan was informed that men on an out-guard post had been cut off by this enemy action. Immediately, and without concern for his own personal safety, he voluntarily exposed himself to enemy fire, located the men and brought them, together with a wounded member, safely back to the trenches. Later, even though Sergeant O'Callaghan was seriously wounded by a round of mortar fire which destroyed the lower part of his left leg, he refused to be evacuated. After dressing his wound himself, he crawled back to the command post and, from that position, controlled platoon action for the bext three and one-half hours, giving orders to the squads over the phone. Not until the enemy had withdrawn did he permit himself to be evacuated. The unselfish heroism, courageous leadership, and outstanding gallantry displayed by Sergeant O'Callaghan reflect distinct credit upon himself and the military service.

Corps of Engineers, United Master Sergeant Wilbur B. Liggett, States Army, a member of Headquarters Company, 23d Engineer Battalion, distinguished himself by heroism at Grafenwohr, Germany, on 9 February 1960. While passing a tank park Sergeant Liggett was informed of a fire in a combat loaded tank. He immediately proceeded to the area and observed the fire entering the turret from the air breather vents. Realizing that fire fighting equipment present had exhausted its chemicals and that the fire would reach explosives before additional equipment could be hooked up, Sergeant Liggett directed the clearance of loaded vehicles from the area and with utter disregard of his own safety entered the turnet of the blazing tank. He turned off the main fuel valve and succeeded in unloading some of the 90MM ammunition before he was driven from the turret by fumes. Upon the arrival of a companion with masks, Sergeant Liggett again cutered the tank and unloaded ammunition until the fire was brought under control. The unhositating courage, leadership, and presence of mind displayed by Sergeaut Liggett reflect great credit upon himself and the military service. (This award supersedes so much of General Orders Number 28, Headquarters, 3d Armored Division (Spearhead), dated 6 April 1960, as pertains to the previous award of the Army Commendation Medal to Sergeant Liggett for meritorious service on 9 February 1960.)

First Lieutenant Joseph D. Ryan. Artillery, a member of Headquarters Battery, 2d Howitzer Battalion, 75th Artillery, distinguished himself by heroism on 9 February 1960. Arriving at the scene after the outbreak of a fire in an M-48 Tank at the Seventh United States Army Training Center at Grafenwohr, Germany, Lieutenant Ryan found the fire raging out of con-Despite the fact that the tank was not within the direct area of his responsibility, he immediately organized a detail to remove the basic load of ammunition from the tank. In the face of deadly carbon tetrachloride fumes and with the ever present danger of a possible explosion, he put on a breathing mask, entered the tank turret, and passed the ammunition out to the detail who quickly removed it from the area. He persisted in his efforts and remained inside the tank until the batteries of the burning vehicle had been disconnected. Lieutenant Ryan's presence of mind, courageous actions, and unselfish concern for his own personal safety in this sudden emergency saved valuable Government property from total destruction, prevented damage to other vehicles in the area. and prevented possible death or injury to personnel. His quick judgment and heroic efforts are in the most cherished tradition of the United States Army, and reflects distinct credit upon himself and the military service.
