, Artillery, United States Army, a member Captain James R. Sanders, of the 8th Aviation Company (Infantry Division), distinguished himself by heroism while participating in aerial flights during the period 15 to 23 July 1960. As a pilot in the Seventh Army Aviation Detachment (Previsional), in support of United Nations operations in the Republic of the Congo, Captain Sanders made daily flights into remote areas and evacuated refugees whose lives and safety were seriously threatened by lawless elements. His personal ingenuity. resourceful lendership, and outstanding technical skill were fully displayed by the many flights which he made over hazardous terrain with virtually no navigational aids other than relatively inaccurate road maps. Oftentimes completely ignoring dangerous fatigue, he flew many hours in excess of the flying-time limitations considered essential to safety. On 10 July 1960, Captain Sanders was assigned the mission of lecuting a downed Belgian aircraft and its pilot. proceeded approximately 100 miles into hostile territory to the general area where the aircraft had fallen and, even though he was fired on upon arrival by hostile elements armed with automatic weapons and small arms, he displayed complete disregard for his own personal safety, and courageously continued the search. Despite the fact that the helicopter which he piloted had sustained eight hits. Captain Randers terminated his efforts to locate the downed Belgian pliot only when forced by a critically low supply of fuel. Throughout this period he inuded his aircraft at more than 12 different sites in the Matadi-Thysville area, frequently in the face of hastile elements on the ground. Ho was directly responsible for the resette of approximately 40 persons. Sanders' heroic actions under extremely hazardous conditions are in keeping with the most cherished traditions of the United States Army, and reflects distinct credit upon himself and the military service.

Major Jones N. Epps, Oddil28 (then Second Lieutenant), Infantry, United States Army, distinguished himself by heroic achievement in connection with military operations against an armed enemy during the period 19 to 21 September 1944. As Machinegun Platoon Leader, Company A, 508th Parachute Infantry, Major Epps led his platoon in an attack on a strategic point in Toufelsberg, Germany, in an effort to seize the high ground overlooking the flat land of the Waal River and the Nymegen-Wyler Highway. As Company A approached the hill from the south, the advance was stopped by enemy rifle and machinicarun fire. The troops took cover immediately and, after becoming reluctant in ni O Ving forward, was gripped with fear of the enemy concealed in the dense foliage. Without hesitation or concern for his own personal safety, Major Enns 1114 ved out into the open and ran to a small knoll where, after exposing himself to dangerous enemy fire, he placed two machineguns in action. He fired soveral bursts of fire, commanded his guns out of action, quickly jumped out front again, and yelled to the men in an effort to inspire them to follow him dow 11 the ridge line. He continued to lead the attack across the hill until he was knocked down by an enemy concussion grenade. Promptly recovering himself, Major 701111 resumed his charge across the ridge in an attempt to place machineguns in 19081tion to deliver followup fire on the fleeing enemy. Immediately after the fire fight, he placed five light machineguns for all-around defense, and disput coincid four men to the battalion distribution point for an additional supply of amria timition to defend this critical position. During the following 2 days, Major Toppa' post was under constant enemy attack, and his courageous efforts and keen strategy enabled him to meet each enemy action with a strong counter-at track. Despite the fact that the position was regularly swept by enemy small arms fire, he moved back and forth across the hill, coordinating machinegun fire and 1111111taining a solid defense effort. The outstanding heroism displayed by Major 10 PP. under severe battle conditions is in the most cherished traditions of the United States Army, and reflects great credit upon himself and the military services.
