When the flooded terrain and tall trees severely impeded rescue operations. Sergeant Heiden voluntarily permitted himself to be lowered from the helicopter down a 75-foot hoist cable onto the roof of a house in an attempt to rescue two elderly people trapped in the attic by the rapidly rising flood waters. cessfully accomplished this dangerous feat despite the full knowledge that one gust of wind could have easily caused his death by slamming him against a tree or into electric wires. After reaching the roof top, using his hands and feet, he tore and kicked a large hole through which the trapped victims were extri-Fighting against the slippery roof and the 100-knot wind downwash from the helicopter, and faced with the constant anxiety of the panic-stricken people, he succeeded in fashioning and securing a harness which raised the couple safely into the aircraft. The courageous action and selfless regard which he displayed for his own personal safety resulted in saving the lives of the two members of that stranded family. Sergeant Heiden's outstanding heroism in this emergency is in the most cherished traditions of the United States Army, and reflects distinct credit on himself and the military service.

Specialist Six Rudolph H. Malpass, , Transportation Corps, United States Army, a member of the 90th Transportation Company (Medium Helicopter), Fort Knox, Kentucky, distinguished himself by heroism on 8 May 1961. Specialist Malpass was performing duty as Crew Chief of an H-37 Helicopter engaged in the rescue of persons trapped in the raging flood waters of the Twin Forks River approximately 15 miles south of Louisville, Kentucky. winds and tall trees made it impossible for the helicopter to hover over a house in an attempt to pick up and evacuate a family of three children and two adults. A patch of ground above water was located some 25 yards away and as soon as the pilot was able to set one landing gear on the high ground, Specialist Malpass voluntarily dived into the swift and treacherous current and swam out to the isolated people. He then successfully rescued the three children and aided the adults in reaching the waiting helicopter. Specialist Malpass' prompt action and unselfish regard for his own personal safety resulted in saving the lives of the five members of a stranded family. Private First Class Billie B. Martin, , Quartermaster Corps, United States Army, a member of the 108th Quartermaster Company, distinguished himself by heroism at Furth, Germany, on 2 July 1961. While performing duty as an interior guard, Private Martin noticed a soldier running toward him and brandishing a pistol. Failing to respond to all orders to halt, the soldier fired a shot at Private Martin and eluded him by running through the gate and away from the limits of the military post. Despite the fact that he was unarmed, and without concern for his own personal safety, Private Martin immediately pursued the soldier for a distance of approximately 200 yards. In the face of subsequent shots fired at him by the soldier, Private Martin managed to catch the soldier, and disarmed and held him until the arrival of military policemen. The prompt, courageous and heroic actions displayed by Private Martin in this situation are worthy of emulation, and reflect distinct credit on himself and the military service.

Sergeant Robert L. Nicholson, , United States Army, a member of Company D, 1st Battle Group, 11th Infantry, Fort Benning, Georgia, distinguished himself by heroism on 31 May 1961. Sergeant Nicholson was performing duty on Dianda Range as an assistant instructor supervising the training of recruits in the handling of live fragmentation grenades. A trainee undergoing instruction dropped an activated grenade in the rear of the throwing bay, endangering the lives of all personnel in that vicinity. Quickly realizing the immediate danger involved, and with complete disregard for his own personal safety. Sergeant Nicholson moved to the activated grenade, seized it and, with only moments to spare, tossed it down range where it exploded instantly upon clearing the safety wall. The prompt action, presence of mind and unselfish courage displayed by Sergeant Nicholson in this sudden emergency prevented serious injury or death to personnel, and reflect distinct credit on himself and the military service.
