V. DISTINGUISHED FLYING CROSS. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the Act of Congress approved 2 July 1926, a Distinguished Flying Cross for extraordinary achievement while participating in aerial flight is awarded to:

Chief Warrant Officer George R. Collinge, [REDACTED], United States Army. 2 to 6 February 1962.

VI. SOLDIER'S MEDAL. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the Act of Congress, approved 2 July 1926, a Soldier's Medal for heroism not involving actual conflict with an enemy is awarded posthumously to:

Specialist Four Bernard T. Barrett, [REDACTED], Infantry, United States Army, while a member of Company A, 2d Airborne Battle Group, 501st Infantry, distinguished himself by heroism on 22 April 1962, while on maneuvers near Rowlesburg, West Virginia. When Specialist Barrett was informed that a girl was clinging to a canoe which capsized near the far shore of the icy, treacherous Cheat River, he unhesitatingly volunteered his services in the rescue effort. With complete disregard for his own personal safety, he plunged into the swollen river and fought the swift current and cold waters with unfaltering perseverance and courage in an attempt to reach the stricken girl. As he neared the far shore, he appeared to tread water for a moment, then was suddenly swept down stream over some violent rapids, and lost his life. Specialist Barrett's heroic action and self sacrifice was in the highest tradition of the United States Army and reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

VII. SOLDIER'S MEDAL. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the Act of Congress, approved 2 July 1926, a Soldier's Medal for heroism not involving actual conflict with an enemy is awarded to:

Specialist Four Charles W. Bowerly, [REDACTED], Infantry, United States Army, a member of Company A, 2d Airborne Battle Group, 501st Infantry, distinguished himself by heroism on 22 April 1962, while on maneuvers near Rowlesburg, West Virginia. When Specialist Bowerly was informed that a girl was clinging to a canoe which capsized near the far shore of the icy, treacherous Cheat River, he unhesitatingly volunteered his services in the rescue effort. With complete disregard for his own personal safety, he plunged into the swollen river, and while he fought the swift current and cold waters to reach the girl, she lost her hold on the canoe and disappeared. Upon reaching the far shore, he learned that one of his comrades who also participated in the rescue effort had been swept into the nearby rapids and disappeared. With unfaltering perseverance and courage, he spent several hours in diving and searching the banks of the dangerous river trying to locate the bodies of the two victims. Specialist Bowerly's heroic action is in the highest tradition of the United States Army and reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

Specialist Four Gary E. Geer, [REDACTED], Military Police Corps, United States Army, a member of the 529th Military Police Company, Headquarters, United States Army, Europe, distinguished himself by heroism on 16 May 1962, at Heidelberg, Germany. When Specialist Geer observed a fellow member suffering from self-inflicted wounds from a knife held in his hands and threatening suicide by leaping from the roof of a four story building, he unhesitatingly rushed to rescue him. Fully aware of the peril of insecure footing on the sharply slanted tile roof, and the fact that the soldier was armed, Specialist Geer, with complete disregard for his own personal safety or life, climbed out on the hazardous roof top, remonstrated with the distraught soldier, carefully grabbed him and led him through a window to safety. Specialist Geer's heroic and voluntary action in this dangerous emergency reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

Private First Class Lloyd F. Mousseau, [REDACTED], Infantry, United States Army, a member of Company A, 2d Airborne Battle Group, 501st Infantry, distinguished himself by heroism on 22 April 1962, while on maneuvers near Rowlesburg, West Virginia. When Private Mousseau was informed that a girl was clinging to a canoe which capsized near the far shore of the icy, treacherous Cheat River, he unhesitatingly volunteered his services in the rescue effort. With complete disregard for his own personal safety, he plunged into the swollen river, and while he fought the swift current and cold waters to reach the girl, she lost her hold on the canoe and disappeared. Upon reaching the far shore, he learned that one of his comrades who also participated in the rescue effort was swept into the nearby rapids and disappeared. With unfaltering perseverance and courage, he spent several hours in diving and searching the banks of the dangerous river trying to locate the bodies of the two victims. Private Mousseau's heroic action is in the highest tradition of the United States Army and reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

Specialist Four Jerome M. Pavnio, [REDACTED], United States Army, a member of Company A, 2d Airborne Battle Group, 501st Infantry, distinguished himself by heroism on 22 April 1962, while on maneuvers near Rowlesburg, West Virginia. When Specialist Pavnio was informed that a girl was clinging to a canoe which capsized near the far shore of the icy, treacherous Cheat River, he unhesitatingly volunteered his services in the rescue effort. With complete disregard for his own personal safety, he plunged into the swollen river, and while he fought the swift current and cold waters to reach the girl, she lost her hold on the canoe and disappeared. Upon reaching the far shore, he learned that one of his comrades who also participated in the rescue effort was swept into the nearby rapids and disappeared. With unfaltering perseverance and courage, he spent several hours in diving and searching the banks of the dangerous river trying to locate the bodies of the two victims. Specialist Pavnio's heroic action is in the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

Sergeant First Class Eugene F. Peck, [REDACTED], United States Army, a member of the Military Assistance Advisory Group, Iran and Military Mission with the Imperial Iranian Army, United States Army Element, distinguished himself by heroism during the period 30 January to 2 February 1962, in West Central Iran. When a United States Army aircraft crashed on a rugged snow covered mountain peak in West Central Iran, air reconnaissance indicated that there were survivors. The crash site was approximately 12,500 feet altitude and was characterized by freezing temperatures, snow ranging from six to forty feet deep, sudden and frequent violent storms, and the constant danger of avalanches. With full knowledge of the great risk to his own personal safety, Sergeant Peck unhesitatingly volunteered to be flown to the area by helicopter to participate in the effort to evacuate the victims. After a hazardous landing on the mountain top, he and his comrades bravely fought through the heavy snow and bitter cold to reach the survivors. The difficulty in moving in the deep snow was intensified by the lack of oxygen due to the high altitude and demanded superhuman effort, energy, and perseverance.

Through his determination and courage, Sergeant Peck greatly assisted in the successful evacuation of the two survivors of the crash. His unselfish and courageous action is in the most honored traditions of the military service and reflects great credit upon himself and the United States Army.

Sergeant Herbert C. Phipps, [REDACTED], Infantry, United States Army, a member of Company A, 2d Airborne Battle Group, 501st Infantry, distinguished himself by heroism on 22 April 1962, while on maneuvers near Rowlesburg, West Virginia. When Sergeant Phipps was informed that a girl was clinging to a canoe which capsized near the far shore of the icy, treacherous Cheat River, he unhesitatingly volunteered his services in the rescue effort. With complete disregard for his own personal safety, he plunged into the swollen river, and while he fought the swift current and cold waters to reach the girl, she lost her hold on the canoe and disappeared. Upon reaching the far shore, he learned that one of his comrades, who also participated in the rescue effort, had been swept into the nearby rapids and disappeared. With unfaltering perseverance and courage, he spent several hours in diving and searching the banks of the dangerous river trying to locate the bodies of the two victims. Sergeant Phipps' heroic action is in the highest tradition of the United States Army and reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

First Lieutenant Zane K. Rector, [REDACTED], Artillery, United States Army, a member of the Military Assistance Advisory Group, Iran and Military Mission with the Imperial Iranian Army, United States Army Element, distinguished himself by heroism during the period 30 and 31 January 1962, in West Central Iran. When a United States Army aircraft crashed on a rugged snow-covered mountain peak in West Central Iran, air reconnaissance indicated that there were survivors. The crash site was approximately 12,500 feet altitude and was characterized by freezing temperatures, snow ranging from six to forty feet deep, sudden and frequent violent storms, and the constant danger of avalanches. With full knowledge of the great risk to his own personal safety, Lieutenant Rector unhesitatingly volunteered to be flown to the area by helicopter to participate in the effort to evacuate the victims. After a hazardous landing on the mountain top, he bravely fought through the heavy snow and bitter cold to assist his comrades in the rescue of the survivors. The difficulty in moving in the deep snow was intensified by the lack of oxygen due to the high altitude and demanded superhuman effort, energy, and perseverance. Through his determination and courage, Lieutenant Rector greatly assisted in the successful evacuation of the two survivors of the crash. His unselfish and courageous action is in the most honored traditions of the military service and reflects great credit upon himself and the United States Army.

Sergeant Ernest H. Smith, [REDACTED], United States Army, a member of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 4th Training Regiment, Specialist, United States Army Training Center, Engineer, Fort Leonard Wood, Missouri, distinguished himself by heroism on 16 November 1961. When Sergeant Smith heard hysterical screams near his trailer home at Waynesville, Missouri, he rushed outside to the source of the commotion. At a near-by trailer house he noticed intense arcing at the base of a television antenna which was in contact with a high tension line. When the arcing subsided, he detected two men lying prostrate near the base of the antenna. Without hesitation or concern for his own personal safety, and fully aware of the extreme danger involved, he evacuated one of the soldiers by tying a web belt around the victim's arm and pulling him away from the electrical current sufficiently for others to administer first aid. By the same method he continued his brave efforts to remove the second victim from the danger area. Sergeant Smith's alert thinking and courageous action are in the most honored traditions of the United States Army and reflect distinct credit upon himself and the military service.

Private First Class William D. Smithies, [REDACTED], Transportation Corps, United States Army, a member of the United States Army Transportation Agency, Japan, distinguished himself by heroism on 1 March 1962, in Tokyo Bay, Japan. Private Smithies was standing by on a seawall to assist an Army Master Diver who was performing underwater repair on a pipeline. He noticed the diver appear on the surface, struggling, and sink below the surface again several times. With complete disregard for his own personal safety, Private Smithies dived fully clothed into the heavy sea prevalent with a strong and dangerous undertow, and swam about three hundred feet to the aid of the semiconscious diver. He brought the diver to the surface, released his SCUBA equipment and the lead weighted belt, and towed him back to the seawall where they were pulled out of the water by persons observing the rescue. Private Smithies' alertness and prompt and courageous action in this emergency reflect great credit upon himself and the military service.

Sergeant First Class Harold C. Stagers, [REDACTED], United States Army, a member of the Military Assistance Advisory Group, Iran and Military Mission with the Imperial Iranian Army, United States Army Element, distinguished himself by heroism during the period 30 January to 2 February 1962, in West Central Iran. When a United States Army aircraft crashed on a rugged snow-covered mountain peak in West Central Iran, air reconnaissance indicated that there were survivors. The crash site was approximately 12,500 feet altitude and was characterized by freezing temperatures, snow ranging from six to forty feet deep, sudden and frequent violent storms, and the constant danger of avalanches. With full knowledge of the great risk to his own personal safety, Sergeant Stagers unhesitatingly volunteered to be flown to the area by helicopter to participate in the effort to evacuate the victims. After a hazardous landing on the mountain top, he and his comrades bravely fought through the heavy snow and bitter cold to rescue the survivors. The difficulty in moving in the deep snow was intensified by the lack of oxygen due to the high altitude and demanded superhuman effort, energy, and perseverance. Through his determination and courage, Sergeant Stagers greatly assisted in the successful evacuation of the two survivors of the crash. His unselfish and courageous action is in the most honored traditions of the military service and reflects great credit upon himself and the United States Army.

Sergeant First Class Walter F. Tiefenauer, Jr., [REDACTED], Artillery, United States Army, while a member of the 1st Missile Battalion (CORPORAL), 40th Artillery, 3d Guided Missile Group, 1st Guided Missile Brigade, United States Army Air Defense Center, Fort Bliss, Texas, distinguished himself by heroism on 28 August 1961, at Orogrande Range Camp, New Mexico. Two enlisted men who were working with a CORPORAL Guided Missile Erector accidentally erected the boom into electrical wiring that carried 13,000 volts. When Sergeant Tiefenauer heard loud cracking noises and saw smoke coming from that area, he immediately rushed to the scene. Upon his arrival, he noticed that electrical sparks were shooting to the ground from the body of one of the soldiers. Realizing the extreme danger involved, he shouted to other approaching personnel not to touch the stricken soldier. With complete disregard for his own personal safety, he then grabbed the rubber coated cable that was attached to the erector and the remote control box, and pulled the highly charged box from beneath the victim. Sergeant Tiefenauer's presence of mind, determination, and courageous action in this emergency are in keeping with the highest traditions of the United States Army, and reflect the utmost credit upon himself and the military service.
