VI. SOLDIER'S MEDAL. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the Act of Congress, approved 2 July 1926, a Soldier's Medal for heroism not involving actual conflict with an enemy is awarded to:

Specialist Five Durward L. Bloom, , United States Army, a member of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, United States Army Alaska Aviation Battalion, distinguished himself by heroism on 6 April 1963, at Portage Glacier, Alaska. While on an outing at Portage Lake, Specialist Bloom saw two small girls and an adult fall through a soft spot in the ice and submerge into the freezing waters of the lake. With complete disregard for his own personal safety, and knowing that the ice might not support him, he unhesitatingly went to their aid. While he was sliding up to the spot where the children were submerged, the ice gave way and he fell into the freezing water. Despite the hazardous condition, Specialist Bloom located the little girls and lifted them out of the water to a place of safety. Then by throwing his coat out to the man, and using it as a tow, he succeeded in pulling him out of the icy lake. Specialist Bloom's heroic action is in the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

Corporal Lester L. Brown, , United States Army, a member of Howitzer Battery, 3d Reconnaissance Squadron, 14th Armored Cavalry, distinguished himself by heroism at the Seventh Army Training Center, Grafenwohr, Germany, on 11 March 1963. During the refueling of an M52 self-propelled 105mm Howitzer, loaded with ammunition, a fire occurred which enveloped a gasoline truck and threatened to ignite other vehicles in the area. With complete disregard for his own personal safety, and despite the danger of an explosion from both the gasoline truck and the Howitzer, Corporal Brown unhesitatingly mounted the Howitzer and drove it a safe distance away from the fire. He then quickly returned to the fire and drove away a quarter ton truck which was parked next to the blazing gasoline tanker. By his courage, decisiveness, and promptness, he averted the possible loss of life and damage to valuable Government property. Corporal Brown's heroic actions are in the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflect great credit upon himself and the military service.

Sergeant Marlin B. Dailey, , United States Army, distinguished himself by heroism on 27 March 1963, at the Long Beach Municipal Airport, California. Sergeant Dailey was performing aircraft maintenance duties at the Army Reserve facility at the Long Beach Municipal Airport when he witnessed the crash of a civilian aircraft. Observing that the plane was on fire, he quickly obtained a chemical fire extinguisher, and rushed to the downed aircraft to render assistance. With complete disregard for his own personal safety and the danger of a gasoline explosion, Sergeant Dailey thrust the fire extinguisher through the broken windshield of the aircraft and controlled the flames sufficiently to enable the removal of the injured pilot from the burning wreckage by fellow rescue workers, moments before the fuel tank exploded. Sergeant Dailey's prompt and heroic action in this emergency is in the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

First Lieutenant Charles D. Darby, , Corps of Engineers, United States Army, while serving as a member of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 65th Engineer Battalion, distinguished himself by heroism on 17 February 1963, at Kawailoa Beach, Oahu, Hawaii. When Lieutenant Darby heard the call for help from a swimmer, who was skin diving approximately 300 yards offshore, and became unable to return to the beach, he immediately went to his aid. With complete disregard for his own personal safety, he plunged into the surf and, despite the heavy seas, began swimming toward the man who was being carried farther out to sea. With determination and tremendous effort, he fought the strong currents and finally reached the swimmer, who was then approximately one-half mile from the shore. He calmed the panic-stricken man, continually encouraged him, and for approximately 30 minutes, supported him in the treacherous water until a member of the Police

Rescue Squad arrived and returned them both to the beach on a surfboard. Lieutenant Darby's heroic action is in the highest traditions of the military service and reflects distinct credit upon himself and the United States Army.

Staff Sergeant August I. Eckert, , United States Army, a member of Howitzer Battery, 3d Reconnaissance Squadron, 14th Armored Cavalry, distinguished himself by heroism at the Seventh Army Training Center, Grafenwohr, Germany, on 11 March 1963. During the refueling of an M52 self-propelled 105mm Howitzer, loaded with ammunition, Sergeant Eckert noticed gasoline flowing from the hose of the gasoline truck and envelop the vehicles in flames. With complete disregard for his own personal safety, and despite the danger of an explosion from both the gasoline truck and the Howitzer, he tried to release a malfunctioning nozzle lever in an attempt to stop the flow of gasoline. Sergeant Eckert continued his brave efforts until his clothing caught on fire and he was forced to retreat from the blaze. After extinguishing his burning clothing, he remained on the scene to insure that all personnel and equipment, including the Howitzer, were removed from the scene of the fire. By his calmness, courage, and decisiveness, he averted the possible loss of life and damage to valuable Government property. Sergeant Eckert's heroic actions are in the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflect great credit upon himself and the military service.

Private First Class James D. Fee, , Artillery, United States Army, distinguished himself by heroism while serving as a member of Mortar Battery, 1st Airborne Battle Group, 501st Infantry, 101st Airborne Division, on 8 May 1963, at Fort Campbell, Kentucky. Private Fee was serving as Cannoneer in the third mortar section during a unit live fire exercise when a ball of fire engulfed the second gun section as the mortar round left its tube, severely burning two soldiers, starting a large grass fire, and exposing the remaining sections to fire and explosion. With complete disregard for his own personal safety, Private Fee rushed to assist in extinguishing the flames from the clothing of one of the severely burned men and in evacuating him to a safe area. He then promptly returned to his section and assisted in removing the rounds of ammunition despite the succession of explosions within the immediate area and the fast spreading flames. When one of the soldiers, who was assisting in removing the ammunition, was wounded during the subsequent explosions, he continued to display his courageous efforts by assisting in the evacuation of the wounded man from the hazardous area. Private Fee's prompt and heroic action in this emergency is in the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflects great credit upon himself and the military service. (This award supersedes the award of the Army Commendation Medal to Private Fee for heroism on 8 May 1963 as announced in General Orders Number 143, Headquarters, 101st Airborne Division and Fort Campbell, dated 12 July 1963.)

Private First Class Joe E. Hofer, , Artillery (then Private), United States Army, a member of the 5th Battalion, 81st Artillery, 8th Infantry Division, distinguished himself by heroism on 23 September 1962. Private Hofer was one of the sixty-eight passengers on board a Flying Tiger airliner which crashed in the stormy Atlantic Ocean, in total darkness, approximately 600 miles from Ireland. During the preparations for the imminent crash of the stricken aircraft, Private Hofer helped to keep panic to a minimum by instilling confidence in the passengers and consoling them with comforting words. Immediately after the initial impact, he completely disregarded his own personal safety by aiding, assisting, and evacuating passengers from the rapidly sinking airliner into life rafts in a heavy running sea and under gale force winds. For 6 hours, while awaiting rescue, he continued his valiant efforts to comfort the survivors and rendered material assistance to the aircraft commander by maintaining seaworthiness, discipline, and high morale among the fifty-one apprehensive passengers crowded into a twenty-five man life raft. Despite the danger of being swept off the life raft into the turbulent sea, he stood up in the raft and effected critical signal communications with search aircraft aloft and approaching surface vessels. His steadfast courage, positive action, and mature judgment were instrumental in saving many lives, and earned for him the lasting gratitude of the survivors and all concerned in this disaster. Private Hofer's heroic action and deep concern for his fellow man are in the highest tradition of the United States Army and reflect distinct credit upon himself and the military service.

Private First Class Milton W. Johnson, , Artillery, United States Army, distinguished himself by heroism while serving as a member of Mortar Battery, 1st Airborne Battle Group, 501st Infantry, 101st Airborne Division, on 8 May 1963, at Fort Campbell, Kentucky. Private Johnson was serving as Cannoneer in the fourth gun section during a unit live fire exercise when a ball of fire engulfed the second gun section as the mortar round left its tube, starting a large grass fire and exposing the remaining sections to fire and explosion. With complete disregard for his own personal safety and the succession of explosions, he unhesitatingly assisted in removing the rounds of ammunition from his gun section and proceeded to the other gun sections to remove the ammunition in the path of the fast spreading flames. When one of the soldiers, who was assisting in the removal of the ammunition, was severely wounded during an explosion, Private Johnson continued to display his courageous efforts by immediately rushing to his aid and assisting in evacuating him from the hazardous area. Private Johnson's prompt and heroic action in this emergency is in the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflects great credit upon himself and the military service. (This award supersedes award of the Army Commendation Medal for heroism on 8 May 1963, as announced in General Orders Number 143, Headquarters 101st Airborne Division and Fort Campbell, Fort Campbell, Kentucky, dated 12 July 1963.)

Sergeant William M. Kalani, , Artillery, United States Army, distinguished himself by heroism while serving as a member of Mortar Battery, 1st Airborne Battle Group, 501st Infantry, 101st Airborne Division, on 8 May 1963, at Fort Campbell, Kentucky. Sergeant Kalani was acting as Platoon Sergeant during a unit live fire exercise when a ball of fire engulfed the second gun section as the mortar round left its tube, severely burning two soldiers, starting a large grass fire, and exposing the remaining gun sections to fire and explosion. Sergeant Kalani immediately assisted in extinguishing the flames from the clothing of the severely burned men, assured their evacuation to a safe area, and then promptly organized personnel to remove the exposed ammunition on the three remaining gun sections from the path of the fast spreading flames. With complete disregard for his own personal safety and the succession of explosions, he repeatedly exposed himself to danger, directed the operations, and removed approximately eight rounds of ammunition which were directly exposed to the fire. Through his courageous efforts, outstanding leadership, and sound judgment, all personnel and ammunition were rapidly removed from the hazardous area. Sergeant Kalani's prompt and heroic action in this emergency is in the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflects great credit upon himself and the military service. (This award supersedes the award of the Army Commendation Medal to Sergeant Kalani for heroism on 8 May 1963 as announced in General Orders Number 143, Headquarters, 101st Airborne Division and Fort Campbell, dated 12 July 1963.)

Specialist Four Raymond D. McEntyre, Jr., United States Army, a member of the 385th General Dispensary, United States Forces, distinguished himself by heroism on 14 April 1963, at Chatellerault, France. While walking along the bank of the Vienne River, Specialist McEntyre heard a woman screaming and saw her pointing at a little girl sinking rapidly in the river and a boy floundering helplessly in the cold turbulent waters. With complete disregard for his own personal safety, Specialist McEntyre unhesitatingly leaped an iron rail, slid down a rocky, jagged stone retaining bank, and dived into the icy water. He swam approximately 30 yards to the point where he last saw the little girl submerge and, upon surface diving, located her and towed her to the bank of the river where local French people lifted her out of the water. He then immediately returned to the aid of the boy who had been swept further downstream and brought him to safety. Specialist McEntyre's heroic action is in the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflects great credit upon himself and the military service. (This award supersedes award of the Army Commendation Medal for heroism on 14 April 1963, as announced in General Orders Number 61, Headquarters U.S. Army Communications Zone, Europe, APO 58, dated 19 June 1963.)

Sergeant First Class Lathon H. Montgomery, United States Army, distinguished himself by heroism on 27 March 1963, at the Long Beach Municipal Airport, California. Sergeant Montgomery was performing aircraft maintenance duties at the Army Reserve facility at the Long Beach Municipal Airport when he witnessed the crash of a civilian aircraft. He rushed to the downed aircraft to render assistance and saw that the pilot's compartment was engulfed in flames. With complete disregard for his own personal safety and the danger of a gasoline explosion, he attempted to unlatch the jammed door of the blazing compartment to extricate the trapped pilot, but was forced back by flames and a small explosion. When another soldier arrived on the scene with a fire extinguisher, Sergeant Montgomery quickly resumed his courageous efforts and succeeded in opening the door. He then unhesitatingly entered the hot and smoke filled compartment and assisted in carrying the pilot safely away from the burning aircraft moments before the fuel tank exploded. Sergeant Montgomery's prompt and heroic action in this emergency is in the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

Specialist Four Johnnie Phillips, Sr., United States Army, distinguished himself by heroism while serving as a member of Headquarters Company, 44th Engineer Group (Construction), 9th Logistical Command (B), on 8 August 1962, at Korat, Thailand. Specialist Phillips was on duty at a unit water point at the Korat city water reservoir when several Thai residents approached him and excitedly indicated in sign language that a young Thai boy had fallen into the reservoir's spillway. Specialist Phillips rushed to the site where the boy fell in the water and, with complete disregard for his own personal safety, unhesitatingly plunged into the swift current, which was at flood stage and flowing down the spillway at approximately 7 feet above normal depth. Surfacing and allowing himself to be carried downstream to where the boy had last been seen, he encountered the boy's body with his foot, and after submerging, brought him to the surface and attempted to tow him to the shore. Upon nearing the shore, he was aided by spectators who had joined hands and formed a human chain extending from 15 to 20 feet into the turbulent waters. Although almost exhausted from the trying rescue, he continued his efforts and rendered artificial respiration to the boy until he regained consciousness. Specialist Phillips' heroic action in this hazardous rescue mission is in the highest tradition of the United States Army and reflects the utmost credit upon himself and the military service.

Captain Charles B. Conselman, , Medical Service Corps, United States Army, distinguished himself by heroism while participating in aerial flight on 6 March 1963, as a member of the 377th Medical Company (Helicopter Ambulance), 65th Medical Group, Eighth United States Army Support Command. As the Pilot of a UH-1A helicopter, Captain Conselman demonstrated unique flying skill, perseverance, and sound judgment in the performance of an extremely hazardous evacuation mission involving the rescue of a seriously injured soldier trapped in a live minefield. Upon arriving at the scene of the accident and realizing that the ground rescue team could not remove the injured man, Captain Conselman unhesitatingly attempted an air rescue. He piloted the aircraft over the minefield covered with scrub pine and, despite the constant danger of another mine explosion or engine failure, skillfully hovered the helicopter at very low altitudes over the accident site, while a rescue team fastened the injured soldier into a sling. Through his expertness in maneuvering the aircraft, the soldier was removed from the minefield to a safe area, and then placed in the helicopter and transported for proper medical treatment. Captain Conselman's outstanding flying ability and heroic action in this emergency reflect great credit upon himself and the military service. (This award supersedes the previous award of the Army Commendation Medal to Captain Conselman for heroism on 6 March 1963, as announced in General Orders Number 24, Headquarters Eighth United States Army Support Command, dated 17 June 1963, as amended by General Orders Number 46, Headquarters Eighth United States Army Support Command, dated 17 August 1963.)

Upon arriving at the scene of the accident and realizing that the ground rescue team could not remove the injured man, Captain Insley unhesitatingly volunteered as Co-pilot for an air rescue. He flew over the minefield covered with scrub pine and, despite the constant danger of another mine explosion or engine failure, rendered invaluable assistance to the pilot in hovering the helicopter at very low altitudes over the accident site, while a rescue team fastened the injured soldier into a sling. Through his expert assistance in maneuvering the aircraft, the injured soldier was removed from the minefield to a safe area, and then placed in the helicopter and transported for proper medical treatment. Captain Insley's outstanding flying ability and heroic action in this emergency reflect great credit upon himself and the military service. (This award supersedes the previous award of the Army Commendation Medal to Captain Insley for heroism on 6 March 1963, as announced in General Orders Number 24, Headquarters Eighth United States Army Support Command, dated 17 June 1963.)

Private First Class Herwig Jaeger, , United States Army, distinguished himself by heroism while participating in aerial flight on 6 March 1963, as a member of the 377th Medical Company (Air Ambulance), 65th Medical Group, Eighth United States Army Support Command. As the Crew Chief of a UH-1A helicopter, Private Jaeger demonstrated professional skill, perseverance, and sound judgment in the performance of an extremely hazardous evacuation mission involving the rescue of a seriously injured soldier trapped in a live minefield. Upon arriving at the scene of the accident and realizing that the ground rescue team could not remove the injured man, Private Jaeger unhesitatingly volunteered as Crew Chief for an air rescue. He flew over the minefield covered with scrub pine and, despite the constant danger of another mine explosion or engine failure, rendered invaluable assistance to the pilots in hovering the helicopter at very low altitudes over the accident site. He displayed complete disregard for his own personal safety by leaning outside the aircraft and skillfully controlling a sling which was suspended from the helicopter while a rescue team fastened the injured soldier into the sling. Private Jaeger's prompt first aid treatment to the soldier after his removal from the minefield for transportation by helicopter for medical treatment, and his display of heroism on this emergency mission, reflect great credit upon himself and the military service. (This award supersedes the previous award of the Army Commendation Medal to Private Jaeger for heroism on 6 March 1963, as announced in section II, General Orders No. 30, Headquarters, Eighth United States Army Support Command, dated 5 July 1963.)

Captain Arlie D. Price, , Medical Service Corps, United States Army, distinguished himself by heroism while participating in aerial flight on 4 November 1962. Captain Price demonstrated unique flying ability, perseverance, and sound judgment in the performance of a hazardous mercy mission. When he was notified of the need of an aeromedical evacuation of a wounded soldier from Wildflecken, Germany, to Wurzburg, Germany, he unhesitatingly volunteered to fly the aircraft on this mission under weather conditions extremely below night flight minimums. With complete disregard for his own personal safety, he skillfully piloted the aircraft through dense fog and haze and, despite the dangerous flying conditions, succeeded in evacuating the patient. Captain Price's courageous action and dedicated devotion to duty reflect distinct credit upon himself and the military service.
