I. DISTINGUISHED SERVICE CROSS. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the Act of Congress, approved 25 July 1963, the Distinguished Service Cross for extraordinary heroism in action against an enemy is awarded posthumously to:

Major Charles L. Kelly, Medical Service Corps, United States Army, distinguished himself by extraordinary heroism in connection with military operations involving an armed hostile force in the Republic of Vietnam, and while serving as an Aircraft Commander, on 1 July 1964. Major Kelly demonstrated exceptional courage, strong determination, and complete disregard for his own personal safety while participating in an aerial medical mission to evacuate wounded soldiers from an area under heavy attack by hostile forces. With unique professional skill and full knowledge of the intense ground fire and the immediate proximity of the enemy, he landed the unarmed helicopter ambulance close to the wounded men in the exposed area. Although the ground advisor warned him of the grave danger and recommended departure, Major Kelly refused to leave without the wounded soldiers and succeeded in loading them aboard the helicopter moments before he was mortally wounded by hostile gun fire. Major Kelly's extraordinary heroic actions, valiant efforts, and deep concern for his fellow man are in the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflect great credit upon himself, the United States Army Medical Service, and the armed forces of his country.

II. DISTINGUISHED SERVICE CROSS. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the Act of Congress approved 25 July 1963, the Distinguished Service Cross for extraordinary heroism in action is awarded, posthumously, to:

First Lieutenant Harold L. McNeil, Artillery, United States Army, distinguished himself by extraordinary heroism in connection with military operations involving an armed hostile force in the Republic of Vietnam on 12 August 1964. As Pilot of a UH-1B helicopter, Lieutenant McNeil demonstrated decisive leadership, fortitude, and professional skill while participating in a reconnaissance mission into an assault zone in support of a military operation conducted by the armed forces of the Republic of Vietnam. When the lead aircraft of the reconnaissance team was struck by hostile ground fire, he bravely flew his helicopter into the combat zone to provide cover for the stricken aircraft. As he skillfully rolled the nose of his helicopter into a firing attitude, an enemy missile penetrated the windshield of the aircraft and lodged in his body. Although the physical reaction caused him to release the controls of the aircraft, he quickly reassumed them, completely ignoring his own serious injury. He then instructed the copilot to take control of the aircraft while he defended the crew and the friendly forces by firing a pair of rockets which silenced a hostile machinegun. His courage, determination, and valiant efforts prevented the destruction of two aircraft and saved the lives of seven men at the sacrifice of his own. Lieutenant McNeil's extraordinary heroic conduct and conspicuous gallantry are in the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflect great credit upon himself and the military service.

III...DISTINGUISHED SERVICE MEDAL. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the Act of Congress, approved 9 July 1918, the Distinguished Service Medal for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished service in a position of great responsibility is awarded to:

Major General Horace F. Bigelow, , United States Army. October 1964 to October 1964.

Major General Richard Collins, , United States Army. December 1965 to November 1964.

IV...SILVER STAR. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the Act of Congress, approved 9 July 1918, the Silver Star (Second Oak Leaf Cluster) for gallantry in action is awarded posthumously to:

Major Joseph W. Burkett, , Infantry, United States Army, distinguished himself by gallantry in action while engaged in military operations in Vietnam on 18 July 1964, and serving as a Senior Advisor to a Vietnamese Ranger Battalion. Upon learning that a district headquarters in a Vietnamese city was under heavy attack by a hostile force of approximately seven hundred, Major Burkett unhesitatingly volunteered to participate in the support effort to relieve the besieged city. He bravely placed himself in a lead position to advise his Vietnamese counterparts and, as the support element neared its objective, it was suddenly ambushed by an overwhelming number of enemy troops which delivered a devastating volume of intense gun fire from well-prepared positions. Then, with fortitude, determination, and complete disregard for his own personal safety, Major Burkett exposed himself to this barrage of weapons fire while assisting in reorganizing the unit and encouraging the friendly troops to pursue their objective. Although subjected to the onslaught of enemy gun fire, he courageously continued his advisory efforts until mortally wounded. Major Burkett's conspicuous gallantry in action is in the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

V...SILVER STAR. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the Act of Congress, approved 9 July 1918, a Silver Star for gallantry in action is awarded posthumously to:

Second Lieutenant William B. Carothorne, Infantry, United States Army, distinguished himself by gallantry in action while engaged in military operations on 30 June 1964, in the Republic of Vietnam. Acting as an aircraft commander on a UH-1B aircraft, Lieutenant Carothorne displayed fortitude, perseverance, and professional skill while providing armed escort for helicopters participating in a resupply mission in support of the ground forces of the Republic of Vietnam. When the helicopters became the target of sporadic small arms fire, he skillfully maneuvered his aircraft close to the terrain to cover the departure of the cargo helicopters from the landing zone. Although he sustained a critical bullet wound as his aircraft crashed into rugged terrain, he succeeded in freeing himself from the demolished aircraft. Despite his own mortal wounds, he continued his courageous efforts by successfully evacuating the injured pilot moments before the aircraft was engulfed in flames. His bravery, determination, and unselfish actions assisted the Vietnamese forces in accomplishing their objectives and saved the life of a fellow soldier at the sacrifice of his own. Lieutenant Carothorne's conspicuous gallantry is in the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

VI...SILVER STAR. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the Act of Congress, approved 9 July 1918, the Silver Star for gallantry in action is awarded posthumously to:

Captain Billy T. Hatfield, Infantry, United States Army, distinguished himself by gallantry in action while engaged in military operations in Vietnam on 13 July 1964, and serving as an Intelligence Advisor to a Chief of a Vietnamese Sector. Upon learning that a district headquarters in a Vietnamese city was under heavy attack by a hostile force of approximately seven hundred, Captain Hatfield unhesitatingly volunteered to participate in the support effort to relieve the besieged city. He bravely placed himself in a lead position to advise his Vietnamese counterparts and, as the support element neared its objective, it was suddenly ambushed by an overwhelming number of enemy troops which delivered a devastating volume of intense gun fire from well-prepared positions. Then, with fortitude, determination, and complete disregard for his own personal safety, Captain Hatfield exposed himself to this barrage of weapons fire while assisting in reorganizing the unit and encouraging the friendly troops to pursue their objectives. Although subjected to the onslaught of enemy gun fire, he courageously continued his advisory efforts until mortally wounded. Captain Hatfield's conspicuous gallantry in action is in the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

VII...SILVER STAR. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the Act of Congress, approved 9 July 1918, a Silver Star for gallantry in action is awarded posthumously to:

Major Charles L. Kelly, Medical Service Corps, United States Army, distinguished himself by gallantry in action while engaged in military operations in Vietnam on 19 June 1964, and serving as an Aircraft Commander. Major Kelly displayed professional skill, fortitude, and determination while participating in an aerial medical mission to evacuate several critically wounded Vietnamese troops. Although his first attempt to land the helicopter ambulance was prevented by intense enemy action, he returned within the hour and succeeded in maneuvering the aircraft into the area. As the small arms, automatic weapons fire, and mortar rounds fell near the aircraft, he exposed himself to the danger while assisting the wounded men on board the helicopter ambulance. When a round of ammunition hit the main fuel drain valve of the aircraft during the evacuation operation, he quickly assessed the situation and, through his decision that the patients on board be flown out immediately for medical treatment, the helicopter landed at a medical facility with a few minutes of fuel to spare. Through his courageous and unselfish actions the wounded men received timely medical aid and many lives were saved. Major Kelly's conspicuous gallantry is in the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

VIII--SILVER STAR. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the Act of Congress, approved 9 July 1918, the Silver Star for gallantry in action is awarded, posthumously, to:

Captain Richard T. Lynch, , Infantry, United States Army, distinguished himself by gallantry in action while engaged in military operations in Vietnam on 10 September 1964. As Senior Advisor to a ranger battalion of the armed forces of the Republic of Vietnam, Captain Lynch displayed fortitude, professional skill, and perseverance while accompanying the battalion on a search and clear operation. Within 10 minutes after the battalion's landing from Regional Force boats, the forward elements received sniper fire. Captain Lynch immediately exposed himself to the danger by taking a lead position with the battalion commander to assist him with tactical advice and to encourage him to maintain contact with the hostile forces. Although the battalion commander succeeded in establishing flank security and automatic weapons deployment to cover the forward movement, as well as maintaining light contact with the enemy, the forward company suddenly encountered heavy automatic weapons and small arms fire directly ahead from an enemy unit of platoon size. As the enemy weapons fire intensified and the battalion sustained heavy casualties, Captain Lynch bravely remained in a semi-exposed position to observe the enemy activity and to provide his counterpart with sound tactical advice. Despite the constant enemy fire, he continued to demonstrate his courageous actions and to inspire the friendly Vietnamese forces until he was mortally wounded. Captain Lynch's conspicuous gallantry is in the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflects great credit upon himself and the military forces.

IX--SILVER STAR. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the Act of Congress, approved 9 July 1918, a Silver Star for gallantry in action is awarded posthumously to:

Captain Richard M. Sroka, , Artillery, United States Army, distinguished himself by gallantry in action while engaged in military operations in Vietnam on 13 July 1964, and serving as a Senior Advisor to a Vietnamese Ranger Battalion. Upon learning that a district headquarters in a Vietnamese city was under heavy attack by a hostile force of approximately seven hundred, Captain Sroka unhesitatingly volunteered to participate in the support effort to relieve the besieged city. He bravely placed himself in a lead position to advise his Vietnamese counterparts and, as the support element neared its objective, it was suddenly ambushed by an overwhelming number of enemy troops which delivered a devastating volume of intense gun fire from well-prepared positions. Then, with fortitude, determination, and complete disregard for his own personal safety, Captain Sroka exposed himself to this barrage of weapons fire while assisting in reorganizing the unit and encouraging the friendly troops to pursue their objective. Although subjected to the onslaught of enemy gun fire, he courageously continued his advisory efforts until mortally wounded. Captain Sroka's conspicuous gallantry in action is in the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

X. SILVER STAR. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the Act of Congress, approved 9 July 1918, a Silver Star for gallantry in action is awarded to:

Captain Donald S. Cunningham, , Infantry, United States Army, distinguished himself by gallantry in action on 4 April 1964 in connection with military operations involving an opposing force in the Republic of Vietnam. As an Advisor to a Vietnamese infantry regiment, Captain Cunningham was accompanying the friendly element on a relief mission when the regiment suddenly encountered two superior battalions of enemy forces. As the regiment was subjected to an onslaught of intense automatic weapons fire and mortars from the front and both flanks, Captain Cunningham demonstrated outstanding professional skill and directed the unit to fall back to a nearby woodline and assume a temporary defensive position. Then, with complete disregard for his own life, he moved from soldier to soldier, encouraging them to return the fire and to advance. When an aircraft and two armed helicopters arrived in the operational area to provide support during the ensuing fire fight, Captain Cunningham bravely exposed himself to the hostile gun fire to establish radio contact with the aircraft and direct the support actions. As the two armed helicopters returned to the scene of the battle after departing for a resupply of ammunition, Captain Cunningham again displayed fortitude and perseverance by continuing to expose himself to the enemy fire to direct the aircraft to the targets. Although he was seriously wounded during his inspiring and courageous actions, he continued his valiant efforts by giving appropriate orders to his radio operator to insure victory for the friendly forces. Captain Cunningham's conspicuous gallantry and extraordinary heroic conduct are in the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflect great credit upon himself and the military service.

Sergeant Peter W. Milbauer, , United States Army, distinguished himself by gallantry in action while engaged in military operations in Vietnam on 30 August 1963. As a passenger on board a CH-21 helicopter, Sergeant Milbauer was participating in a mission to support the ground forces of the Army of the Republic of Vietnam when another United States Army helicopter crashed in the midst of extremely heavy hostile gun fire. As soon as his pilot landed the helicopter in the combat zone to assist in the evacuation of the crew members and equipment of the downed aircraft, Sergeant Milbauer swiftly left the aircraft, ran through the intense gun fire, and assisted in evacuating the injured crew members. When the hostile gun fire increased in intensity within close proximity of his position, he defended his fellow soldiers by returning the gun fire. He then continued to display his fortitude and complete disregard for his own personal safety by returning to the wreckage three times to assist in carrying the injured men away from the flanking gun fire. Sergeant Milbauer's unselfish actions and conspicuous gallantry in this hazardous situation are in the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

Captain Carl W. Strever, , Transportation Corps, United States Army, distinguished himself by gallantry in action while engaged in military operations on 19 October 1963, in the Republic of Vietnam. As Pilot of a CH-21 helicopter, Captain Strever displayed fortitude, perseverance, and professional skill while participating in a troop airlift operation in support of the ground forces of the Republic of Vietnam. When the lead aircraft was struck by small arms and automatic weapons fire during the first landing and rendered incapable of further flight, coming to rest on its right side, Captain Strever quickly assessed the danger of the situation and maneuvered his helicopter into a position between the downed aircraft and the source of the hostile gun fire to afford the crew protection. As a medical helicopter arrived on the scene to evacuate the stricken personnel, he continued to use his helicopter as a barrier against the hostile ground fire while the evacuation was conducted. Then, when the machine gunner of his aircraft was critically wounded during the action, Captain Strever left the cockpit, manned the machinegun, and defended his fellow soldiers by returning the fire until all the ammunition was expended. Although struck by shrapnel from hostile rounds, he completely disregarded his own wounds, and did not request the copilot to make the takeoff until all of the crew of the demolished aircraft were evacuated while he remained with the seriously injured gunner to administer first aid. Captain Strever's unselfish actions and conspicuous gallantry are in the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

Captain Donald F. Van Eynde, , Infantry, United States Army, distinguished himself by gallantry in action while engaged in military operations in Vietnam on 14 May 1964, as a Unit Advisor to a Ranger Battalion of the Armed Forces of the Republic of Vietnam. Captain Van Eynde was accompanying elements of the unit on a mission to relieve a besieged hamlet when this relief force was suddenly ambushed by hostile forces and subjected to heavy mortar and automatic weapons fire. During the ensuing engagement, Captain Van Eynde displayed determination, professional skill, and fortitude while continuously exposing himself to the intense gun fire to estimate the situation, to recommend appropriate action to his counterpart, and to assist in moving the troops to a defilade position. When his Assistant Unit Advisor was wounded, Captain Van Eynde carried and assisted him across two barriers and through an area of heavy automatic weapons fire to a small group of rangers who were making a withdrawal. Then when his fellow officer was unable to maintain the pace of the withdrawing rangers, Captain Van Eynde again displayed complete disregard for his own safety, remained with his assistant, defended their position by returning the hostile gun fire, evaded the enemy, and assisted the wounded officer through eight kilometers of jungle to safety. His brave actions, perseverance, and personal example were an inspiration to the Vietnamese forces and served to prevent the capture of his assistant and the annihilation of the unit. Captain Van Eynde's conspicuous gallantry is in the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

Specialist Four Brayton Witherell, II, (then Private First Class), United States Army, distinguished himself by gallantry in action while engaged in military operations in Vietnam on 30 August 1963. As a crew member on board a CH-21 helicopter, Specialist Witherell was participating in a mission to support the ground forces of the Army of the Republic of Vietnam when another United States Army helicopter crashed in the midst of extremely heavy hostile gun fire. As soon as his pilot landed the helicopter in the combat zone to assist in the evacuation of the crew members and equipment of the downed aircraft, Specialist Witherell swiftly left the aircraft, ran through the intense gun fire, and evacuated an injured crew member. Although he was wounded through the leg while attempting to return to the downed aircraft, he ignored his own injury and defended his fellow soldiers by returning the gun fire until the evacuation operation was completed. Specialist Witherell's fortitude, unselfish actions, and conspicuous gallantry in this hazardous situation are in the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflect great credit upon himself and the military service.

Captain Michael N. Antoniou, Transportation Corps, United States Army. 26 September 1964.

Major John A. Johnston, Transportation Corps, United States Army. 15 September and 19 September 1964.

Chief Warrant Officer Emery E. Nelson, Transportation Corps, United States Army. 7 October 1964.

Chief Warrant Officer Joseph C. Watts, Transportation Corps, United States Army. 23 September 1964.

Captain William L. Welter, Jr., , Transportation Corps, United States Army. 7 October 1964.

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the Act of Congress, approved 2 July 1926, a Distinguished Flying Cross (First Oak Leaf Cluster) for extraordinary achievement while participating in aerial flight is awarded by the Department of the Army to:

Captain Jack A. Walker, , Infantry, United States Army. 24 August 1963.

XIV. SOLDIER'S MEDAL. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the Act of Congress, approved 2 July 1926, a Soldier's Medal for heroism not involving actual conflict with an enemy is awarded posthumously to:

Private Lonnie E. Shrum, , United States Army, while serving as a member of Battery A, 3d Howitzer Battalion, 3d Artillery, Fort Knox, Kentucky, distinguished himself by heroism on 23 June 1964, in Lake Erie, near Squaw Camp Beach, Ohio. Private Shrum was a member of a swimming party when he heard calls for help from a fellow soldier swimming in the waters of Lake Erie. With complete disregard for his own personal safety, he jumped off a raft and swam toward the drowning man in an attempt to save him despite the high waves and strong undercurrents. Upon reaching the soldier, he succeeded in keeping him afloat for a short time and continued his courageous actions until his efforts were in vain as both of them disappeared beneath the surface. Private Shrum's heroic actions and self-sacrifice are in the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflect great credit upon himself and the military service.

XV. SOLDIER'S MEDAL. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the Act of Congress, approved 2 July 1926, a Soldier's Medal for heroism not involving actual conflict with an enemy is awarded posthumously to:

Second Lieutenant Norton B. Wilson, Jr., , Infantry, United States Army, distinguished himself by heroism on 30 March 1964, near Kirchgoens, Germany, while serving as Platoon Leader, 3d Platoon, 2d Battalion, 36th Infantry, United States Forces, Europe. Lieutenant Wilson was conducting a road march along a double track railroad bed when he noticed that the soldier acting as rear guard had failed to see an approaching train. Although he ran at full speed toward the guard and shouted warnings, the man apparently did not hear him and remained on the tracks. Upon reaching the guard and realizing the great danger to him, Lieutenant Wilson completely disregarded his own personal safety and attempted to save the life of his fellow soldier by pushing him out of the path of the oncoming train at the sacrifice of his own life. Lieutenant Wilson's unselfish actions and heroic conduct are in the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflect great credit upon himself and the military service.

XVI. SOLDIER'S MEDAL. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the Act of Congress, approved 2 July 1926, a Soldier's Medal for heroism not involving actual conflict with an enemy is awarded to:

Staff Sergeant William R. Coz, , United States Army, as a member of the Airborne Training Group, Airborne-Air Mobility Department, United States Army Infantry School, distinguished himself by heroism on 11 May 1964, near Fort Benning, Georgia. As Jumpmaster, Sergeant Cox was flying to a drop zone with a group of students who were to perform their first of five qualifying parachute jumps when the aircraft developed engine trouble, crashed, and burned. Prior to crash, he calmly assisted in the direction of all safety measures and kept panic to a minimum. After the initial impact, he completely disregarded his own personal safety, ignored his own injuries, immediately directed evacuation operations, and remained in the flaming aircraft until all of the wounded and survivors were cleared of the wreckage. His sound judgment, courageous actions, and professional skill in this emergency prevented the loss of a great number of lives among his fellow soldiers. Sergeant Cox's heroic conduct is in the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

Specialist Four Robert K. Dewey, , United States Army, as a member of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, United States Army Aerial Support Center, distinguished himself by heroism near St. Andre, France, on 15 February 1964. Specialist Dewey was driving his automobile on a road in France when he noticed smoke coming from the direction of an Army helicopter which had descended into a wheat field. He immediately drove his car across a plowed field to reach the helicopter and, upon arriving at the scene, saw the aircraft completely enveloped in flames. Then, with complete disregard for his own personal safety and ignoring the extreme hazard, he rushed toward the aircraft and assisted three injured men in getting away from the crash site. He then placed the injured personnel in his car and drove them to the nearest military hospital for medical treatment. Specialist Dewey's unselfish actions and heroic conduct in this emergency are in the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflect great credit upon himself and the military service.

Master Sergeant Peter K. Giuchici, , United States Army, as a member of the Sixth United States Army Advanced Marksmanship Training Unit, Fort Ord, California, distinguished himself by heroism on 3 September 1964, near Canute, Oklahoma. While driving west on a United States highway, Sergeant Giuchici voluntarily and courageously assisted a Deputy United States Marshal and his assistant who had been overpowered in an automobile by three prisoners. Upon observing a violent struggle in another car on the opposite side of the road, Sergeant Giuchici immediately stopped his vehicle and took a pistol from his car to assist the law officers. Although the prisoners had shot the Deputy United States Marshal and were using chains to beat the wounded officer and his assistant during the ensuing fight in progress outside of the automobile, Sergeant Giuchici attempted to cross the highway while fired upon by the prisoners. Then, with complete disregard for his own personal safety, he returned the fire and, as he advanced across the highway, the prisoners threw the wounded officers into a ditch and made their escape with the Marshal's automobile. Sergeant Giuchici quickly obtained the services of a passing motorist to transfer the wounded officers to a hospital while he reported the incident to the proper authorities. By his fortitude, perseverance, and positive actions, he assisted materially in saving the lives of the two United States law officers. Sergeant Giuchici's heroic conduct and deep concern for his fellow man are in the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflect distinct credit upon himself and the military service. (This award supersedes the award of the Army Commendation Medal to Sergeant Giuchici for bravery above and beyond the call of duty on 3 September 1964 as announced in General Orders Number 53, Headquarters, United States Army Training Center, Infantry, and Fort Ord, California, dated 22 October 1964.)

Platoon Sergeant Timothy Hightower, , United States Army, as a member of Company C, 2d Battalion, 15th Armor, 1st Cavalry Division, distinguished himself by heroism at a noncommissioned officers club in Korea on 8 March 1964. While serving as Master of Arms, Sergeant Hightower observed a hysterical soldier enter the club with a grenade in his hands which were positioned to release the safety pin and heard his open threats to those present. With complete disregard for his own personal safety, Sergeant Hightower unhesitatingly grasped both hands of the soldier to prevent the release of the safety pin and simultaneously shouted an evacuation warning to persons in the club. After a lengthy struggle and persuasive talk with the berserk soldier, he succeeded in disarming the man and removing him from the club. His sound judgment, courage, and prompt action averted the possible loss of life and damage to Government property. Sergeant Hightower's heroic conduct in this dangerous situation is in the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

Private First Class Franklin G. Mead, , United States Army, distinguished himself by heroism on 11 March 1964 at Pier 4, New York, while serving as a Military Police at the Brooklyn Army Terminal, New York. When Private Mead was informed at midnight that a man had fallen from an unlighted pier into the icy waters of New York Bay, he immediately drove to the scene to render assistance. Upon learning that the victim, a Navy man, was too numb from exposure to respond to the rescue techniques of the personnel on the pier, Private Mead completely disregarded his own personal safety, volunteered to be lowered into the water to tie a line around the waist of the man trapped in a narrow opening between a barge and the pier, and succeeded in his efforts. Then, when the rescue party on the pier was unable to haul both of them from the water at the same time, Private Mead ignored the danger of being crushed between the barge and pier by water movement, and unhesitatingly released himself from the line to permit the Navy man to be pulled to safety first. Private Mead's heroic action in this hazardous rescue mission reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

Platoon Sergeant Howard G. Miller, , United States Army, as a member of the Airborne Training Group, Airborne-Air Mobility Department, United States Army Infantry School, distinguished himself by heroism on 11 May 1964, near Fort Benning, Georgia. As a Noncommissioned Safety Officer, Sergeant Miller was flying to a drop zone with a group of students who were to perform their first of five qualifying parachute jumps when the aircraft developed engine trouble, crashed, and burned. Prior to the crash, he calmly assisted in the direction of all safety measures and kept panic to a minimum. After the initial impact, he completely disregarded his own personal safety and assisted in the evacuation of students from the burning wreckage. Throughout the dangerous operation, he continued to display his fortitude and perseverance by re-entering the burning aircraft to personally remove other trapped students from the wreckage, and by assisting in the attempts to control the fire despite the danger of a gasoline explosion. His sound judgment, courageous actions, and professional skill in this emergency prevented the loss of a great number of lives among his fellow soldiers. Sergeant Miller's heroic conduct is in the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

Specialist Five Aoese A. Osoimalo, , United States Army, while serving as a member of Battery B, 2d Missile Battalion (NIKE-HERCULES), 51st Artillery, Fort Cronkhite, California, distinguished himself by heroism on 23 May 1964, in San Francisco, California. Specialist Osoimalo was in an audience watching a show when fire broke out on the stage in a Parish Hall in San Francisco. After helping his wife crawl to safety, he completely disregarded his own personal safety and re-entered the blazing building to rescue a child that was screaming for help. Despite the flames and dense smoke, he located the child and succeeded in bringing him to safety before he collapsed himself from the severe burns he sustained during his courageous actions. Specialist Osoimalo's heroic conduct and deep concern for others in this emergency are in the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflect great credit upon himself and the military service.

Second Lieutenant Stephen B. Richardson, , Medical Service Corps, United States Army, as a member of the 45th Company, 4th Student Battalion, The Student Brigade, United States Army Infantry School, distinguished himself by heroism on 11 May 1964, near Fort Benning, Georgia. As an airborne student, Lieutenant Richardson was flying to a drop zone to perform his first of five qualifying parachute jumps when the aircraft developed engine trouble, crashed, and burned. After the initial impact, he succeeded in escaping from the burning wreckage. Then, with complete disregard for his own personal safety, he re-entered the flaming aircraft to rescue students still trapped in the wreckage and continued his courageous efforts until the flames became too intense to continue the search. Lieutenant Richardson's unselfish actions and heroic conduct in this emergency are in the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflect great credit upon himself and the military service.

Sergeant Paul L. Woods, , United States Army, as a member of the Airborne Training Group, Airborne-Air Mobility Department, United States Army Infantry School, distinguished himself by heroism on 11 May 1964, near Fort Benning, Georgia. As a Noncommissioned Safety Officer, Sergeant Woods was flying to a drop zone with a group of students who were to perform their first of five qualifying parachute jumps when the aircraft developed engine trouble, crashed, and burned. Prior to the crash, he calmly assisted in the direction of all safety measures and kept panic to a minimum. After the initial impact, he completely disregarded his own personal safety and assisted in the evacuation of students from the burning wreckage. Throughout the dangerous operation, he continued to display his fortitude and perseverance by re-entering the burning aircraft to personally remove other trapped students from the wreckage despite the danger of a gasoline explosion. His sound judgment, courageous actions, and professional skill in this emergency prevented the loss of a great number of lives among his fellow soldiers. Sergeant Woods' heroic conduct is in the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

XVII.—BRONZE STAR MEDAL. By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 11046, 24 August 1962, the Bronze Star Medal with "V" device for heroic achievement in connection with military operations against hostile forces is awarded to:

Sergeant First Class Bernard B. Brown, , United States Army, distinguished himself by heroic achievement on 25 April 1964 while engaged in military operations involving conflict with an opposing armed force in the Republic of Vietnam. As a member of Advisory Team 28, United States Army Element, Military Assistance Advisory Group to Vietnam, Sergeant Brown displayed fortitude, perseverance, and professional skill. He was accompanying a Vietnamese Infantry squad on a military operation when hostile forces halted the squad's movement by a daylight attack. Despite the language barrier, he urged the unit forward by using hand signals and encouraged them to pursue their objective while exposed to hostile gun fire. His able direction of the operations enabled the friendly forces to evacuate a wounded Vietnamese soldier from an area close to the enemy position. By his personal example, professional advice, and devotion to duty, he succeeded in rallying the Vietnamese forces which resulted in the accomplishment of their mission. Sergeant Brown's heroic conduct and outstanding performance of duty during this hazardous situation are in the highest traditions of the military service and reflect great credit upon himself and the United States Army.

Sergeant Major Kenneth W. Cooper, , Infantry, United States Army, as a member of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 2d Battle Group, 4th Cavalry, 1st Cavalry Division, distinguished himself by heroic achievement while engaged in military operations against an opposing force on 30 July 1963, in Korea. Upon learning that an armed North Korean patrol had been sighted in a village in the Republic of Korea, Sergeant Cooper unhesitatingly volunteered to join the skirmish line to drive out the hostile forces. When the hostile forces failed to respond to his appeals to cease fire, he organized a search to locate the hostile agents. Although a fellow soldier and one of the Republic of Korea national policemen close to him were suddenly felled by hostile gun fire, he displayed coolness and fortitude, made his way toward the direction of the gun fire, and participated in locating the hostile force. Despite the gun fire and his exposed position, he completely disregarded his own personal safety and succeeded in preventing the hostile action from materializing further. His courage, professional competence, and devotion to duty served to avert further casualties to his unit and contributed in great measure to the successful accomplishment of the mission. Sergeant Cooper's heroic actions in this hazardous situation reflect great credit upon himself and the United States Army. (This award supersedes award of the Army Commendation Medal for heroic achievement on 30 July 1963, as announced in General Orders Number 104, Headquarters, 1st Cavalry Division, APO 24, dated 15 October 1963.)

Private First Class Robert E. Eldridge, , Infantry, United States Army, as a member of Company E, 2d Battle Group, 4th Cavalry, 1st Cavalry Division, distinguished himself by heroic achievement while engaged in military operations against an opposing force on 30 July 1963, in Korea. Upon learning that an armed North Korean patrol had been sighted in a village in the Republic of Korea, Private Eldridge unhesitatingly volunteered to join the skirmish line to drive out the hostile forces. When a fellow soldier and one of the Republic of Korea national policemen close to him were suddenly felled by hostile gun fire during the advance, he displayed coolness and fortitude, made his way toward the direction of the gun fire, and participated in locating the hostile forces. Despite the gun fire and his exposed position, he completely disregarded his own personal safety and prevented hostile action from materializing. His courage, professional competence, and devotion to duty served to avert further casualties to his unit, and contributed in great measure to the successful accomplishment of the mission. Private Eldridge's heroic actions in this hazardous situation reflect great credit upon himself and the United States Army. (This award supersedes award of the Army Commendation Medal for heroic achievement on 30 July 1963, as announced in General Orders Number 104, Headquarters 1st Cavalry Division, APO 24, dated 15 October 1963.)

First Lieutenant Thomas N. Pattie, , Infantry, United States Army, distinguished himself by heroic achievement while engaged in military operations against an opposing armed force on 2 January 1964, in the Republic of Vietnam. As an Assistant Advisor to a Vietnamese battalion, Lieutenant Pattie demonstrated fortitude, professional skill, and perseverance when the unit came under heavy enemy fire while conducting a "Search and Clear" operation. When sniper fire prevented the perimeter company from providing support and the utility tactical transports were called in to suppress the hostile action, Lieutenant Pattie seized a radio, rushed to an open clearing vantage point, and succeeded in directing the strike operations of the utility tactical transports despite his exposure to the enemy gun fire. His professional competence, devotion to duty, and brave actions inspired his Vietnamese counterparts and enabled the battalion to reorganize their defenses and proceed to their objective. Lieutenant Pattie's heroic conduct and outstanding performance of duty in this hazardous situation reflect great credit upon himself and the United States Army.

First Lieutenant William G. Privette, , United States Army, distinguished himself by heroic achievement on 25 April 1964 while engaged in military operations involving conflict with an opposing armed force in the Republic of Vietnam. As an Assistant Infantry Battalion Advisor, Advisory Team 47, United States Army Element, Military Assistance Advisory Group to Vietnam, Lieutenant Privette demonstrated fortitude, professional skill, and perseverance during a military operation. He bravely accompanied a Vietnamese armored carrier unit with a mission of evacuating their wounded and dead from an area close to hostile forces well-entrenched in a hillside position. As the unit approached the area, he displayed complete disregard for his own personal safety, dismounted from the carrier and, despite the language barrier, urged the carrier crew forward and encouraged them to pursue their objective while exposed to hostile gun fire. His able direction of the operations enabled the friendly forces to evacuate a wounded Vietnamese soldier from the area of enemy action. By his personal example, professional competence, and devotion to duty, he contributed to the success of the mission. Lieutenant Privette's heroic conduct and outstanding performance of duty during this hazardous situation are in the highest traditions of the military service and reflect great credit upon himself and the United States Army.

First Lieutenant Robert M. Tarbet, Jr., , Armor, United States Army, distinguished himself by heroic achievement on 25 April 1964 while military operations involving conflict with an opposing armed force in the Republic of Vietnam. As an Assistant Infantry Battalion Advisor, Advisory Team 47, United States Army Element, Military Assistance Advisory Group to Vietnam, Lieutenant Tarbet demonstrated professional skill, courage, and determination during a military operation. He bravely accompanied a Viet-name armored carrier unit with a mission of evacuating their wounded and dead from an area close to hostile forces well-entrenched in a hillside position. As the unit approached the area, he displayed complete disregard for his own personal safety, dismounted from the carrier and, despite the language barrier, urged the carrier crew forward and encouraged them to pursue their objective while exposed to hostile gun fire. While dismounted and void of cover, he continued his courageous efforts by applying first aid to a wounded soldier and assisting him to the safety of an armored carrier. By his personal example, professional competence, and devotion to duty, he contributed to the success of the mission. Lieutenant Tarbet's heroic conduct and outstanding performance of duty during this hazardous situation are in the highest traditions of the military service and reflect great credit upon himself and the United States Army.
