I_DISTINGUISHED SERVICE MEDAL. By direction by the President, under the provisions of the Act of Congress, approved 9 July 1918, the Distinguished Service Medal for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished service in a position of great responsibility is awarded to:

Major General William D. Graham, , Medical Corps, United States Army. July 1961 to October 1965.

II_SILVER STAR. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the Act of Congress, approved 9 July 1918, a Silver Star for gallantry in action is awarded to:

Lieutenant Colonel Richard E. Oliver, , Corps of Engineers, (then Sergeant, United States Army Air Corps), United States Army, distinguished himself by gallantry in action on 23 February 1942 while serving as a member of the 435th Bombardment Squadron, 19th Bombardment Group (H). As a bombardier on a B-17E type aircraft, Colonel Oliver demonstrated fortitude and professional skill on a bombing mission. After the plane departed from Townsville, Australia shortly after midnight, it arrived over the Japanese base of Rabaul, on the northeastern portion of New Britain at daybreak in the midst of heavy antiaircraft fire. Although one bombing run was made over the ships in the harbor, faulty racks prevented the release of the bombs. Despite the sight of pursuing enemy aircraft, Colonel Oliver requested the pilot to make another run over the target which resulted in the release of all but two of the 600-pound bombs. As the ship was leaving the target area, it was attacked by eight zero fighters. Colonel Oliver immediately manned his nose gun and prevented head-on attacks. After the enemy withdrew from the 30-minute engagement and a fuel shortage forced the pilot to land in the swamps in New Guinea, Colonel Oliver played a primary role in maintaining the spirits of the crew during a prolonged ordeal. For 5 weeks, while they endured hunger, thirst, and malaria, he constantly encouraged the crew members as they worked their way back to their unit. Colonel Oliver's conspicuous gallantry in action is in the highest traditions of the military service and reflects great credit upon himself and the United States Army Air Corps.

Lieutenant Colonel Donald V. Rattan, , Infantry, United States Army, distinguished himself by gallantry in action on 19 August 1964 while serving as Chief Observer of a Mobile Training Team during a violent uprising in the Republic of the Congo. Colonel Rattan was participating in a reconnaissance mission with three other members of a joint team when they were suddenly attacked by an overwhelming force of Congolese rebels. Upon sustaining gunfire damage to his vehicle, he immediately directed the members of the team to flee to safety while he remained in his position, acting as a decoy although armed merely with a rifle in opposition to the onslaught of twelve hostile warriors wielding automatic weapons. Despite the extreme danger, he steadfastly covered the withdrawal of the team through two kilometers of hazardous terrain and succeeded in keeping the hostile force pinned down until his associates were hidden safely in the dense bush. Through his determination, indomitable courage, and complete disregard for his own safety to protect the lives of his fellow men, he prevented possible casualties and capture of the team. Colonel Rattan's conspicuous gallantry in action is in the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

III__LEGION OF MERIT. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the Act of Congress approved 20 July 1942, and Executive Order 10600, 15 March 1955, the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding service is awarded posthumously to:

VII_DISTINGUISHED FLYING CROSS. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the Act of Congress, approved 2 July 1926, the Distinguished Flying Cross for heroism while participating in aerial flight is awarded by the Department of the Army to:

Warrant Officer Charles J. Humphries, , United States Army. 29 December 1964.

Lieutenant Colonel Donald H. Jersey, , Transportation Corps, United States Army. 23 to 31 December 1964.

Chief Warrant Officer Alva W. Kepner, , United States Army. 23 to 30 December 1964.

Captain John E. Kilgallen, Transportation Corps, United States Army. 23 to 30 December 1964.

Captain James L. Mitchell, Jr., Transportation Corps, United States Army. 23 to 30 December 1964.

VIII_SOLDIER'S MEDAL. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the Act of Congress, approved 2 July 1926, a Soldier's Medal for heroism not involving actual conflict with an enemy is awarded to:

Captain Rodney S. Beasley, , Infantry, United States Army, while serving as an Aviator, 173d Airborne Brigade (Separate), United States Army, Ryukyu Islands, distinguished himself by heroism on 28 August 1964, over the East China Sea. As a helicopter copilot, Captain Beasley was approaching the runways of Hamby Airfield when he and the pilot were informed of an overwater bailout. He unhesitatingly volunteered to accompany the pilot to the bailout to assist in recovering the pilot of the downed aircraft. When a parachute was observed protruding from the water, it was assumed that the missing pilot was still fastened to the parachute skids. After several attempts to snare the parachute with the helicopter skids, Captain Beasley displayed complete disregard for his own safety, climbed out on the skid of the hovering helicopter, and tried to grasp the sinking parachute. Unable to reach it, he then jumped, fully clothed, into the water and attempted to secure the water-soaked parachute to the helicopter skids. Throughout the dangerous operation, he continued to demonstrate his perseverance, courage, and fortitude until an Air Force rescue helicopter arrived on the scene to assist in the rescue operation. Captain Beasley's heroic conduct, determination, and deep concern for a fellow aviator are in the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflect great credit upon himself and the military service.

Specialist Four Glendall R. Brooks, (then Private First Class), United States Army, as a Light Vehicle Driver of the 519th Transportation Company, distinguished himself by heroism on 21 November 1964, in Heidelberg, Germany. Specialist Brooks was driving a military sedan when a small automobile, occupied by three foreign soldiers, crashed violently into his vehicle. The foreign car, with a ruptured gasoline tank, immediately burst into flames. Although dazed by the initial impact of the crash, Specialist

Brooks climbed out of his severely damaged sedan, rushed toward the burning automobile, and assisted in removing the three occupants, one of whom was unconscious. His prompt action and complete disregard for his own safety while standing in burning gasoline contributed significantly to the timely and successful rescue of the accident victims. Specialist Brooks' deep concern for his fellow man and heroic conduct in this emergency are in the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflect great credit upon himself and the military service.

Sergeant Frederick C. Burk, , United States Army, as a member of Company C, 10th Special Forces Group (Airborne), 1st Special Forces, distinguished himself by heroism on 29 May 1965, near Oberwarngau, West Germany. Sergeant Burk was driving on a road in Germany when he witnessed a motor vehicle crash in which one of the cars immediately burst into flames. He stopped his car, rushed toward the burning vehicle with a fire extinguisher, and attempted to put out the fire in the blazing car occupied by an American soldier and a German girl. When this action did not quell the fire, he disregarded his own safety, entered the flaming vehicle, removed the unconscious girl, and placed her by the side of the road. Then with the assistance of a German national, he removed the American soldier from the vehicle and carried him to safety. Continuing his profound concern for his fellow man, he administered first aid to the victims until medical assistance arrived on the scene. Sergeant Burk's sound judgment, prompt actions, and heroic conduct in this emergency are in the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflect great credit upon himself and the military service.

Private First Class George A. Butler, , United States Army, distinguished himself by heroism on 6 February 1965, while serving as a military policeman in Company B, 728th Military Police Battalion, Taejon, Korea. Private Butler was performing normal military traffic patrol when he saw a small Korean boy fall through the ice covering the Yuchon River. He stopped his vehicle, ran to the bank of the river and, with complete disregard for his own safety, began to crawl over the ice to the floundering child when the ice broke under his weight. Then, he forged his way toward the boy, breaking the ice with his forearms. Through his determination and great effort, he succeeded in reaching the boy and in bringing him to the safety of the shore. After being assured that the child was feeling fine, he released him to a group of Korean adults who had congregated at the scene. Private Butler's heroic conduct in this emergency is in the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

Staff Sergeant Roy D. Carmack, , United States Army, as a member of Company C, 2d Battalion (Mechanized), 17th Infantry, distinguished himself by heroism on 12 April 1965, in Korea. Sergeant Carmack was on the scene during a mechanical repair of an Armored Personnel Carrier when the vehicle, loaded with ammunition, burst into flames. After two mechanics were forced from the carrier when the fixed fire extinguisher failed to put out the blaze and an explosion was imminent, Sergeant Carmack displayed complete disregard for his own safety in an effort to extinguish the fire. He grabbed a portable fire extinguisher and, although attired only in field clothing, entered the burning carrier and succeeded in extinguishing the flames. His courage and prompt actions prevented possible injury to personnel on the scene and damage to Government property. Sergeant Carmack's heroic conduct in this emergency situation is in the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

Specialist Four Jeff H. Caves, ., United States Army, as a member of the 559th Military Police Company, Fort Monroe, Virginia, distinguished himself by heroism on 20 February 1965, near Richmond, Virginia. Specialist Caves was driving on a highway when he approached the scene of a three-car collision. Although all of the three vehicles were engulfed in flames and observers were shouting warnings, Specialist Caves completely disregarded his own safety and ignored the extreme heat and danger of a gasoline explosion in his efforts to rescue the victims. He rushed to the first car, freed the driver, and moved him to a safe area. Then, despite the erroneous information from by standers that there were no occupants remaining in the other vehicles, he returned to the scene of the crash, broke the rear window of the second car, evacuated two occupants, and moved them to safety with the assistance of another man. Continuing his profound concern for his fellow man, he returned to the first victim and administered first aid. Specialist Caves' sound judgment, prompt actions, and heroic conduct in this emergency are in the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflect great credit upon himself and the military service.

Private First Class Bruce D. Chambers, , United States Army, distinguished himself by heroism while serving as a member of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion (Mechanized), 23d Infantry, 2d Infantry Division, on 18 November 1964 at Fort Benning, Georgia. Private Chambers was performing his duties in a motor pool when he saw a gasoline tanker on fire. With complete disregard for his own safety, he ran to the burning tanker and drove it away from two other fuel tankers which were parked next to the blazing vehicle. Through his prompt actions and courageous efforts, he prevented possible injury to personnel on the scene and loss of valuable Government property. Private Chambers' heroic conduct in this emergency is in the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

Private First Class Harvey D. Clements, Jr., , United States Army, distinguished himself by heroism while serving as a member of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion (Mechanized), 23d Infantry, 2d Infantry Division, on 18 November 1964 at Fort Benning, Georgia. Private Clements was performing his duties in a motor pool when he saw another soldier mount a burning gasoline tanker to drive it away from two other fuel tankers in the area. With complete disregard for his own safety, Private Clements jumped up on the burning tanker and opened the tank covers to avert an explosion. Through his successful effort, prompt action, and courage, he prevented possible injury to personnel on the scene and loss of valuable Government property. Private Clements' heroic conduct in this emergency is in the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

Second Lieutenant Robert D. Coale, , Ordnance Corps, United States Army, while serving as Commanding Officer of the 34th Ordnance Detachment (Explosive Disposal), Sierra Army Depot, distinguished himself by heroism on 23 June 1965, near the Southeastern section of Plumas County, California. Lieutenant Coale and three companions were fishing from a boat on Frenchman Dam Reservoir approximately 500 yards from the shore when he heard screams coming from a camp site and saw a truck-mounted trailer engulfed in flames. He proceeded immediately to the scene and upon arrival, learned that one or more children were trapped inside the burning vehicle. With complete disregard for his own safety and ignoring the danger of an explosion, he jumped in the truck and drove it into the lake where he and his companions succeeded in extinguishing the flames. Although one child succumbed, his courage and prompt action prevented an explosion of the gasoline tank and possible injury to the number of bystanders. Lieutenant Coale's heroic conduct in this emergency is in the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

Colonel Albert E. Cotter, , Artillery (then First Lieutenant), United States Army, distinguished himself by heroism while serving as a member of Battery "B", 838th Antiaircraft Artillery Automatic Weapons Battalion (Mobile), in Lyon, France, on 26 August 1945. Colonel Cotter was on garrison duty in the proximity of a garage when he heard screams and saw a mechanic, who had been cleaning a truck engine, run from the motor shed with his head and clothing aflame. With complete disregard for his own safety, Colonel Cotter caught the soldier, threw him to the ground, and smothered the flames with his own body. He then continued to demonstrate his deep concern for his fellow man by directing the evacuation of the victim to a local hospital unit for treatment. Colonel Cotter's heroic conduct in this emergency is in the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

Private First Class James T. Fitzsimmons, , United States Army, as a member of the 28th General Hospital, Phoenixville, Pennsylvania, distinguished himself by heroism on 2 April 1965, in the vicinity of Phoenixville, Pennsylvania. Private Fitzsimmons was one of five persons in a car when it skidded on an icy road as it approached a bridge, went over an embankment, and landed upside down in approximately 5 feet of water. After freeing himself from the wreckage, he worked diligently to extricate three of the passengers who were trapped in the rear seat of the crushed vehicle. With complete disregard for his own safety, he went under the water three times and each time succeeded in rescuing a victim. Moments before the driver reached safety unaided. Private Fitzsimmons had plunged into the icy water for the fourth time to rescue the driver. Private Fitzsimmons' heroic conduct, perseverance, and profound concern for his fellow man during this emergency are in the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflect great credit upon himself and the military service.

Private First Class Lonnie Glasscock III, , United States Army, as a member of the United States Military Liaison Mission, United States Forces, distinguished himself by heroism on 1 June 1965, in Potsdam, Neu Fahrland, Soviet Zone of Germany. Private Glasscock was the driver of a United States Military Liaison Mission reconnaissance vehicle when a dangerously hostile mob surrounded the United States car and attempted to destroy it and injure the occupants with stones, bricks, and clubs. Despite the hail of objects on the windshield and the shattered fine glass in his eyes and face, Private Glasscock responded to the hazardous circumstances with determination, courage, and sound judgment. He successfully broke through a blockade of rioters to establish the first contact with personnel in the United States Military Mission Potsdam House which had been under violent attack by the same unruly mob. Through his bravery, skill as a driver, and profound concern for his fellow man, possible injury to the occupants of the vehicle was prevented and the United States Mission House was provided with reinforcements. Private Glasscock's heroic conduct in this extremely dangerous situation is in the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

Private First Class Charles L. Hilley, , Signal Corps, United States Army, while serving as a member of the 592d Signal Company (Support), Berlin, Brigade, distinguished himself by heroism on 2 February 1965 in Berlin, Germany. Private Hilley was driving through a busy intersection when he witnessed an accident in which a German vehicle collided with a United States Army truck that burst into flames as it overturned. He immediately stopped his own vehicle, ran to the blazing Army truck, kicked out a window, pried the window frame away with his bare hands, and pulled a fellow soldier to safety. Continuing to display complete disregard for his own safety, he returned to the burning truck with a fire extinguisher and expended the contents on the flames engulfing the gas tank to prevent an explosion. Upon noticing that two injured men had been removed from the German vehicle involved in the accident, he quickly approached them and administered first aid. He then assisted in controlling a large crowd that had gathered and directed traffic until German and United States Military Police arrived on the scene. Private Hilley's sound judgment and prompt actions, coupled with his heroic conduct in this emergency and profound concern for his fellow man, are in the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflect great credit upon himself and the military service.

Specialist Four David B. Horgeshimer, , Infantry, United States Army, as a member of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 10th Infantry, distinguished himself by heroism on the night of 1 February 1965, at Fort Carson, Colorado. While on guard duty, Specialist Horgeshimer saw an operations tent burst into flames and then ignite an armored personnel carrier to which it was attached. With complete disregard for his own safety, Specialist Horgeshimer rushed to the burning carrier, opened the driver's hatch, and tried to start the engine in an attempt to drive the vehicle away from the Operations Center. Although the open hatch fanned the blaze and the intense smoke and heat forced him to leave the vehicle, he returned to it quickly with a protective mask and again lowered himself into the flaming carrier. He succeeded in getting it started and drove it a safe distance from the burning operations tent. He then continued his courageous efforts by assisting others in extinguishing the flames which were concentrated in the area of the vehicle's fuel tank. Through his prompt actions and bravery, he averted the loss of Government equipment and possible injury to personnel on the scene. Specialist Horgeshimer's heroic conduct in this emergency is in the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

Specialist Four (then Private First Class) Tom E. Horne, United States Army, while serving as a member of Headquarters Battery, 6th Missile Battalion, 517th Artillery, United States Forces, Europe, distinguished himself by heroism on 19 August 1964, at a United States Army General Depot in Germany. Specialist Horne and eight other soldiers were in a scullery room of a mess hall when a hot water line broke, spraying boiling water and preventing the men from escaping through the exits. With complete disregard for his own safety, Specialist Horne unhesitatingly crawled under the steaming hot spray and, despite the intense pain from severe burns on his body, succeeded in reaching a shut-off valve and turning off the water. His perseverance and courageous action in this dangerous situation prevented possible serious injury to his fellow soldiers. Specialist Horne's heroic conduct in this emergency is in the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflects great credit upon himself and the military service. (This award supersedes the award of the Army Commendation Medal to Specialist Horne for meritorious achievement on 19 August 1964 as announced in General Orders Number 13, Headquarters, Seventh Army, APO U.S. Forces 09046, dated 11 March 1965.)

Private First Class James E. Lee, , United States Army, while serving as a member of Field Support Company, Troop Command, United States Army Chemical Center and School, distinguished himself by heroism on 13 April 1965 at Fort McClellan, Alabama. Private Lee was one of two passengers in a 21/2-ton truck when the vehicle swerved out of control on a steep downhill road, overturned and caught fire, throwing both passengers out of the truck and pinning the driver under the wreckage. Although suffering from shock and lacerations, Private Lee immediately carried the other passenger away from the burning vehicle. Then, with complete disregard for his own safety, he returned to the blazing truck and succeeded in freeing the driver who was trapped in the wreckage. After pulling the driver a safe distance from the wreckage, Private Lee extinguished the flaming clothing on the driver and sustained burns on his own arms in this effort. He then ran 700 meters to telephone for help. Upon returning to the scene of the accident, he continued to give aid to the two injured men until medical assistance arrived. Private Lee's heroic actions in this emergency and deep concern for his fellow soldiers are in the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflect distinct credit upon himself and the military service.

Sergeant First Class Joseph J. Milewski, (then Technician Fifth Grade), United States Army, distinguished himself by heroism on 6 November 1946, in Germany while serving as a member of the 68th Constabulary Squadron, 3d Constabulary Regiment, United States Army European Land Group. When a fire broke out in the Squadron's ammunition dump, Sergeant Milewski was among the first volunteers to arrive on the scene to extinguish the extremely dangerous blaze. With complete disregard for his own safety, he entered a room adjacent to one in which small grenades and ammunition were exploding and succeeded in evacuating artillery shells, land mines, and other grenades. Despite the dense smoke and the hazardous conditions, he continued to fight the fire for over a half an hour until a unit from the German civilian fire department arrived on the scene. Sergeant Milewski's heroic conduct in this emergency is in the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

Private First Class John L. Rafferty, , United States Army, 265th Ordnance Company, Cumberland, Maryland, while serving on active duty at Erie Army Depot, Port Clinton, Ohio, distinguished himself by heroism on 23 June 1964 in the waters of Lake Erie at Camp Perry, Ohio. Private Rafferty was swimming in the shallow waters of Lake Erie when he heard calls for help from a fellow soldier who was floundering in rough waters after having been on a raft which drifted 150 feet from the shoreline. With complete disregard for his own safety and ignoring the strong wind and turbulent water, Private Rafferty swam to the stricken soldier and succeeded in towing him to the safety of the shore. Private Rafferty's prompt actions, heroic conduct, and profound concern for his fellow man are in the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflect great credit upon himself and the military service.

First Lieutenant Thomas C. Richardson, Jr., . Infantry, United States Army, distinguished himself by heroism on 2 April 1965 while serving as Assistant Training Officer, Second Battalion, 13th Infantry, during a river crossing operation on the Rhein River back waters near Lampertheim, Germany. After all of the armored personnel carriers had successfully crossed the river, Lieutenant Richardson was on the bank of the river when a carrier entered the water again for its second flotation, suddenly tipped forward, and sunk to the bottom of the river with the driver and vehicle commander inside. Lieutenant Richardson swiftly removed his boots and, with complete disregard for his own safety, dove into the unfamiliar waters in an attempt to free the two trapped soldiers in the sunken vehicle. Upon reaching the submerged carrier, he located the occupants, aided them in their escape from the vehicle, and then helped them out of the river to the safety of the shore. Lieutenant Rickardson's prompt actions, heroic conduct, and profound concern for the welfare of his fellow soldiers are in the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflect great credit upon himself and the military service. (This award supersedes award of the Army Commendation Medal awarded for heroism on 2 April 1965, as announced in General Orders Number 89, Headquarters, 8th Infantry Division, APO U.S. Forces 09111, dated 1 June 1965.)

Staff Sergeant Jerry Seidel. , United States Army, while serving as a member of Staff and Faculty Battery, United States Army Artillery and Missile School, Fort Sill, Oklahoma, distinguished himself by heroism on 19 September 1964, at Lake Elmer Thomas in the Wichita Mountain Wildlife Refuge, Oklahoma. Sergeant Seidel demonstrated fortitude, decisiveness, and complete disregard for his safety to save the lives of two fellow soldiers who were in immediate danger of drowning after their boat had capsized at night in a lake known to contain poisonous snakes and heavy underwater vegetation. Despite the hazards and lack of visibility, Sergeant Seidel unhesitatingly entered the water, pushing a homemade raft ahead of himself, and swam to the area from which the cries for help were heard. Upon reaching the exhausted men, he discovered that one man was entangled in the underwater weeds and that the other was experiencing severe leg cramps. After encouraging the men and assisting them in hanging onto the raft, he succeeded in towing the victims to the safety of the shore. Sergeant Seidel's profound concern for his fellow man and prompt and heroic action in this emergency are in the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflect great credit upon himself and the military service. (This award supersedes the award of the Army Commendation Medal to Sergeant Seidel for meritorious achievement on 19 September 1964 as announced in General Orders Number 36, Headquarters, United States Army Artillery and Missile Center, Fort Sill, Oklahoma, dated 23 February 1965.)

Captain Henry J. Touhey, Infantry, United States Army, distinguished himself by heroism on 7 December 1963 in Okinawa while serving as a member of the United States Army Special Forces Detachment A-412, Company D, 1st Special Forces Group (Airborne), 1st Special Forces. Captain Touhey was participating in a training exercise when a simulated parachute drop of supplies landed outside of the drop zone and into the Pacific Ocean. During the recovery operation an Army sergeant became extremely exhausted in his attempt to fight the treacherous current and swim to the floating material. Captain Touhey immediately displayed complete disregard for his own safety, unhesitatingly dove into the dangerous waters, and succeeded in reaching the drowning soldier. Then, with determination and great physical effort, he brought the unconscious sergeant back to the shore where he was revived by artificial respiration. Captain Touhey's heroic conduct and deep concern for his fellow man are in the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflect great credit upon himself and the military service.

Specialist Four (then Private First Class) William B. Zerbe, as a member of Headquarters Company, 35th Engineer Battalion (Construction), Fort Lewis, Washington, distinguished himself by heroism on 15 October 1964, at Priest Rapids, Columbia River, Washington. When Specialist Zerbe heard calls for help coming from the rapids, he immediately went to the aid of a man who was struggling in the icy and turbulent waters of the Columbia River after his boat had capsized. With complete disregard for his own safety and despite the fact that he was not a strong swimmer, Specialist Zerbe plunged into the dangerous river with an air mattress, succeeded in reaching the victing and towed him to the safety of the shore. Specialist Zerbe's heroic conduct, prompt actions, and deep concern for his fellow man are in the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflect great credit upon himself and the military service. (This award supersedes the award of the Army Commendation Medal to Specialist Zerbe for heroic action on 15 October 1964, as announced in General Orders Number 3, Headquarters Fort Lewis, Fort Lewis, Washington, dated 17 January 1965.)

IX_BRONZE STAR MEDAL. 1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 11046, 24 August 1962, the Bronze Star Medal for meritorious service in connection with military operations against hostile forces is awarded to:

20

Master Sergeant Floyd L. Welshans, , United States Army. February 1963 to July 1965.

Sergeant First Class Adolph G. Wilson, , United States Army. March 1962 to April 1962.

3. By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944, a Bronze Star Medal with "V" device for heroic achievement in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States is awarded to:

Major Robert J. Barr. , Corps of Engineers (then First Lieutenant, Infantry), United States Army, distinguished himself by heroic achievement in connection with military operations against an armed enemy in Korea on 11 July 1952, and while serving as a member of Company E, 27th Infantry Regiment, 25th Infantry Division. Major Barr and a squad were on their way to assist a patrol when they encountered a mine field in which five seriously injured men were trapped in the dangerous area after a mine detonation. With full knowledge of other live mines in the field, and ignoring his own safety, Major Barr unhesitatingly volunteered to assist in carrying the wounded soldiers out of the hazardous mine field. Although the terrain was characterized by a slope that required unusual physical exertion to reach the wounded men, Major Barr repeatedly returned to the scene of the explosion to help carry the injured soldiers back to the main line of resistance. Through his fortitude, determination, and profound concern for his fellow soldiers, he contributed materially to the timely evacuation of the injured men. Major Barr's heroic conduct is in the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflects the utmost credit upon himself and the military service.

Sergeant First Class Neil D. Cost. , United States Army, while serving as a member of Medical Company, 7th Cavalry Regiment, 1st Cavalry Division, distinguished himself by heroic achievement in connection with military operations against an armed enemy on 11 November 1950, near Onmudong-Yangjich'am, Korea. When Sergeant Cost learned that C Company had sustained heavy casualties during an attack across 600 yards of open farm land, he swiftly organized a medical litter team, left his safe position at the battalion aid station, and led the team into the midst of the fighting to evacuate the wounded. Despite the hail of enemy small arms and machinegun fire, he moved from position to position to administer medical aid to the casualties. After all of the wounded in the rear of the Company were treated and evacuated, Sergeant Cost displayed complete disregard for his own safety as he moved approximately 75 yards ahead of the Command Post to the front lines where the lead elements were pinned down and the casualties greatest in number. With fortitude and determination, he remained in this hazardous position while treating all casualties possible and moving them to covered positions for later evacuation. His courage and dedicated devotion to duty alleviated the suffering of his fellow soldiers and enabled them to receive professional medical treatment quicker than normally expected under battle conditions. Sergeant Cost's heroic conduct during this military engagement is in the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflects distinct credit upon himself and the military service.

X_AIR MEDAL. By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9158, 11 May 1942, as amended by Executive Order 9242-A, 11 September 1942, an Air Medal for heroism while participating in aerial flight is awarded posthumously by the Department of the Army to:

, (then Specialist Four). Specialist Five James D. Huckobey, United States Army, while serving as a member of Company A, 7th Aviation Battalion, 7th Infantry Division, distinguished himself by heroism while participating in aerial flight in the vicinity of Chorwon, Korea on 1 March 1965. When informed of the need of an aerial operation to recover the body of a hunter from a known but uncharted mine field, Specialist Huckobey unhesitatingly volunteered as Assistant Crew Chief of an Army CH-21 helicopter for the dangerous mission. While the pilot hovered the helicopter inches from the ground, Specialist Huckobey hung from the door of the aircraft and exposed his body from the waist forward to the mine infested area to reach the victim. Through his determination and courage, he continued this brave effort for over an hour until the recovery operation was completed. His fortitude and perseverance, combined with the invaluable assistance he provided the pilot in guiding the aircraft, contributed significantly to the success of the difficult evacuation mission. Specialist Huckobey's heroism and professional skill in this perilous recovery operation reflect great credit upon himself and the military service.

Specialist Six Wallace E. Draughn, , Transportation Corps, as a member of Aviation Company, 14th Armored Cavalry, distinguished himself by heroism while participating in aerial flight on 16 November 1964, in Germany. As a crew chief on board a helicopter, Specialist Draughn demonstrated exceptional professional skill, perseverance, and sound judgment in the performance of a dangerous evacuation mission. When notified of the need of an aeromedical evacuation of a seriously injured soldier from one medical facility to another for emergency surgery, Specialist Draughn unhesitatingly volunteered for the mission despite the hazardous weather conditions. Although high winds, severe turbulence, and poor visibility slowed the flight, he provided the pilots with invaluable assistance in evacuating the patient and in flying the injured man form the Wildflecken Annex to the United States Army Hospital in Landstuhl, Germany. Specialist Draughn's outstanding professional ability, deep concern for a fellow soldier, and courageous actions in this emergency reflect distinct credit upon himself and the military service.

Chief Warrant Officer Robert L. Johnson, , Transportation Corps, as a member of Aviation Company, 14th Armored Cavalry, distinguished himself by heroism while participating in aerial flight on 16 November 1964, in Germany. As a copilot of a helicopter, Chief Warrant Officer Johnson displayed perseverance, sound judgment, and unique flying skill in the performance of a dangerous evacuation mission. When notified of the need of an aeromedical evacuation of a seriously injured soldier from one medical facility to another for emergency surgery, Chief Warrant Officer Johnson unhesitatingly volunteered for the mission despite the hazardous weather conditions. Although high winds, severe turbulence, and poor visibility slowed the flight, he provided invaluable assistance in evacuating the patient and in completing the mercy mission in which the injured man was flown from the Wildflecken Annex to the United States Army Hospital in Landstuhl, Germany. Chief Warrant Officer Johnson's outstanding flying ability, deep concern for a fellow soldier, and courageous actions in this emergency reflect distinct credit upon himself and the military service.

, while serving as a member of Staff Sergeant Clyde L. Pine, Company A, 7th Aviation Battalion, 7th Infantry Division, distinguished himself by heroism while participating in aerial flight in the vicinity of Chorwon, Korea, on 1 March 1965. When informed of the need of an aerial operation to recover the body of a hunter from a known but uncharted mine field, Sergeant Pine unhesitatingly volunteered as Crew Chief of an Army CH-21 helicopter for the dangerous mission. While the pilot hovered the helicopter inches from the ground, Sergeant Pine hung from the door of the aircraft and exposed his body from the waist forward to the mine infested area to reach the victim. Through his determination and courage, combined with the invaluable assistance he provided the pilot in guiding the aircraft, he contributed materially to the success of the difficult evacuation mission. Sergeant Pine's heroism, perseverence, and professional skill in this perilous recovery operation reflect great credit upon himself and the military service. (This award supersedes the award of the Army Commendation Medal for heroism on 1 March 1965, as announced in General Orders Number 127, Headquarters 7th Infantry Division, APO San Francisco, 96207, dated 15 July 1965.)

First Lieutenant Edward J. Preston, Jr., , Medical Service Corps, as a member of the 421st Medical Company (Air Ambulance), distinguished himself by heroism while participating in aerial flight on 11 February 1965 in Germany. As a copilot of a helicopter, Lieutenant Preston demonstrated unique flying skill, perseverance, and sound judgment in the performance of a dangerous evacuation mission. When notified of the need of an aeromedical evacuation of a seriously injured American soldier from one hospital to another for emergency heart surgery, Lieutenant Preston unhesitatingly volunteered for the mission despite the hazardous weather and poor visibility. Although icing conditions precluded an instrument flight, he provided invaluable assistance in evacuating the patient and in flying the injured man from the Army Hospital in Bad Connstatt to the Army Hospital in Landstuhl, Germany. Lieutenant Preston's outstanding flying ability, deep concern for a fellow soldier. and courageous actions in this emergency reflect distinct credit upon himself and the military service.

Chief Warrant Officer Harold F. Richardson, , as a member of Aviation Company, 14th Armored Cavalry, distinguished himself by heroism while participating in aerial flight on 16 November 1964, in Germany. As a pilot of a helicopter, Chief Warrant Officer Richardson demonstrated sound judgment, determination, and outstanding flying ability in the performance of a dangerous evacuation mission. When notified of the need of an aeromedical evacuation of a seriously injured soldier from one medical facility to another for emergency surgery, Chief Warrant Officer Richardson unhesitatingly volunteered for the mission despite the hazardous weather conditions. Although high winds, severe turbulence, and poor visibility slowed the flight, he efficiently evacuated the patient and successfully completed the mercy mission by flying him from the Wildflecken Annex to the United States Army Hospital in Landstuhl, Germany. Chief Warrant Officer Richardson's unique flying skill, deep concern for a fellow soldier, and courageous actions in this emergency reflect distinct credit upon himself and the military service.

Specialist Five Orville S. Wiseman, , United States Army, as a member of the 421st Medical Company (Air Ambulance), distinguished himself by heroism while participating in aerial flight on 11 February 1965 in Germany. As a crew chief on board a helicopter, Specialist Wiseman demonstrated exceptional professional skill, perseverance, and sound judgment in the performance of a dangerous evacuation mission. When notified of the need of an aeromedical evacuation of a seriously injured American soldier from one hospital to another for emergency heart surgery, Specialist Wiseman unhesitatingly volunteered for the mission despite the hazardous weather and poor visibility. Although icing conditions precluded an instrument flight, he provided the pilots with invaluable assistance in evacuating the patient and in flying the injured man from the Army Hospital in Bad Cannstatt to the Army Hospital in Landstuhl, Germany. Specialist Wiseman's outstanding professional ability, deep concern for a fellow soldier, and courageous actions in this emergency reflect distinct credit upon himself and the military service.
