I—DISTINGUISHED SERVICE CROSS. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the Act of Congress, approved 25 July 1963, the Distinguished Service Cross for extraordinary heroism in action against an enemy is awarded posthumously to:

Captain Hugh R. Nelson, Jr., O99098, Artillery, United States Army, distinguished himself by extraordinary heroism on 5 June 1966 while serving as a member of the 114th Aviation Company (Airmobile Light) and engaged in military operations in the Republic of Vietnam. Captain Nelson was acting as Aircraft Commander of a Cobra aircraft when it was struck by hostile gun fire, downed in the middle of many insurgent positions, and had all weapons destroyed in the crash. Upon the initial impact, all persons aboard the aircraft were unconscious. As the first person to regain consciousness with the physical ability to aid the other three crew members, Captain Nelson ignored his own injuries, debarked the aircraft, and started to evacuate his fellow soldiers. Proceeding to the left side of the aircraft, he ripped off the door with his bare hands and removed a dazed Specialist who had been pinned in the cargo compartment. After placing the Specialist on the ground and observing that the injured pilot had managed to get out of the aircraft, Captain Nelson climbed into the Cobra to assist another Specialist who was still trapped in the aircraft. Although the insurgents began a heavy volume of automatic and small arms fire at a range of approximately thirty feet from the aircraft, he continued his brave efforts until he freed the trapped crew member. He then forced the Specialist to the ground and, using his own body as a human shield to cover his comrade, saved the life of his fellow soldier at the sacrifice of his own. Through his gallant efforts, he enabled a crew member to send a signal with a smoke grenade to supporting aircraft which responded immediately and resulted in the successful evacuation of the survivors. Captain Nelson's extraordinary heroism on the battlefield reflects great credit upon himself, the United States Army, and the armed forces of his country.

II—DISTINGUISHED SERVICE CROSS. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the Act of Congress, approved 25 July 1963, the Distinguished Service Cross for extraordinary heroism in action against an enemy is awarded posthumously to:

Platoon Sergeant Clifton Winningham, RA14317635, United States Army, distinguished himself by extraordinary heroism on 5 March 1966 while serving as a member of the 1st Platoon, Company C, 2d Battalion, 28th Infantry and engaged in military operations in the Republic of Vietnam. During a vicious assault by the Viet Cong, Platoon Sergeant Winningham displayed indomitable courage. When informed that a man stationed at a listening post was wounded and unable to return to the friendly lines, Platoon Sergeant Winningham attempted to reach the wounded man by crawling out of the perimeter but was stopped by hostile gun fire. He then rallied four men to follow behind him to cover his movement to the listening post. After they reached this position and found their comrade dead, he unhesitatingly volunteered to remain alone at the listening post to cover the return of the men with their deceased comrade. With complete disregard for his own safety, he remained at the post until the men reentered the friendly lines before proceeding behind them. As the hostile action intensified, he continued to encourage the men and to demonstrate his gallant efforts until felled by hostile gun fire. Platoon Sergeant Winningham's extraordinary heroism on the battlefield reflects great credit upon himself, the United States Army, and the armed forces of his country.

Division, Fort Benning, Georgia, distinguished himself by heroism on 9 February 1965 in the vicinity of Apparri Heliport, Fort Benning. Specialist Barnes was a passenger on board a helicopter when it failed to gain altitude after take off, struck a tree, traveled approximately three hundred and fifty yards, and began to burn as it came to rest on its left side. As he was in the act of leaving the burning aircraft, he noticed that the pilot was slumped over in his seat and appeared to be unconscious. Although his own clothing was saturated with fuel, Specialist Barnes completely ignored his own safety, turned his attention toward the pilot, and, with the assistance of the crew chief, succeeded in pulling the pilot from the seat and removing him from the helicopter. Despite the danger of an explosion, he worked diligently to assure the safety of the pilot before leaving the helicopter himself. Specialist Barnes' deep concern for the welfare of others and his heroic conduct in this hazardous situation are in the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflect great credit upon himself and the military service.

Staff Sergeant Ludwig Berndt, RA19410408, United States Army, distinguished himself as assistant instructor and platoon sergeant on 4 February 1966 at Fort Leonard Wood, Missouri, while his unit was engaged in training with hand grenades. Staff Sergeant Berndts' alertness, professional ability, and heroism have brought great credit upon himself and the United States Army.

Captain Leonard A. Curcio, O2281337, (then First Lieutenant), Signal Corps, United States Army, as a member of the 101st Signal Battalion, New York Army National Guard, distinguished himself by heroism on 20 October 1963 near Hasings, New York. Captain Curcio was driving on a New York highway when he came upon a vehicle accident with one of the cars on fire. Observing that the injured occupants of both vehicles had been placed on the road in close proximity to the burning vehicle, he tried to smother the fire in the car trunk by inserting a fire extinguisher into an opening between the frame and the trunk door. Then, with the assistance of a patrolman on the scene Captain Curcio succeeded in getting the trunk key from the ignition and, after a series of maneuvers, managed to yank open the trunk door and apply the fire extinguisher to the blaze until the foam was expended. Although forced back momentarily by the intense heat, he darted forward again, and tore the burning material from the trunk. In this effort he sustained severe burns on both arms. Through his courageous actions and determination, he prevented a possible explosion and further injury to the people on the scene. Captain Curcio's heroic conduct is in the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

Specialist Four William E. Johnson, RA15459004, United States Army, as a member of Company A, 97th Quartermaster Battalion, distinguished himself by an act of heroism on 4 January 1966 near Gamburg, West Germany. Riding as assistant driver in the rear of a convoy, Specialist Johnson observed a 5,000 gallon gasoline tanker skid off the road and down and embankment. The vehicle's engine and lights were still on and gasoline was leaking from the cracked tanker. At any moment a spark from the electrical system could have caused an explosion. The driver and assistant driver were trapped in the crushed cab of the tanker. Specialist Johnson leaped from his own vehicle and scrambled down to the aid of the trapped soldiers. Ignoring the threat of imminent explosion, he ripped open the crushed cab of the vehicle and pulled out the injured driver. Having helped the driver to a safe area, Specialist Johnson returned to free the unconscious assistant driver. He returned a third time to shut off the engine and lights to prevent an explosion. Specialist Johnson's quick thinking and daring action in the face of great danger to himself was in the highest tradition of the United States Army and reflects great credit upon himself and his unit.

Uttal, ER13797437, United States Army, as a member of the 304th Civil Affairs Group, United States Army Reserve Center, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, distinguished himself by heroism on 2 September 1965 in the vicinity of Darien, Connecticut. Specialist Uttal was on the Connecticut Turnpike enroute to annual active duty training when his detail came upon an overturned tractor trailer in which a female passenger was trapped in the cab of the vehicle. With complete disregard for his own safety, he approached the vehicle with its engine smoking and fuel escaping. Determining the uselessness of a fire extinguisher, he quickly obtained tools and diverted the flow of fuel from the engine, exhaust, and electrical areas. His prompt actions, bravery, and professional skill enabled others on the scene to evacuate the injured woman. Through his courage and initiative, he also prevented further injury to others on the highway as well as additional property damage. Specialist Uttal's heroic conduct in this emergency is in the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

In the face of great danger, Lietuenant Wallace quickly pushed the soldier to a prone position, leaped over him, seized the grenade, and threw it outside the protective wall of the bunker moments before it exploded. His prompt actions, indomitable courage, and complete disregard for his own safety in this hazardous situation prevented injury or possible loss of life to the trainee. Lieutenant Wallace's heroic conduct in this emergency is in the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflects great credit upon himself and the military service. The village was immediately secured, the wounded treated, and the defense reestablished. Then when patrols reported that the Viet Cong were preparing to attack the village at night, he quickly evacuated the wounded and United States personnel while he voluntarily remained to direct the operation. Exposing himself to sniper fire, he checked each defensive position, weapons emplacement, and avenue of approach. When the Viet Cong attacked and attempted to penetrate the village three times in the hours of darkness. he responded to each instance by moving from his command post to the scene of action to direct the defense operation. Although the aircraft was required to orbit for one hour and often exposed to hostile gun fire and adverse weather, he repeatedly volunteered for these perilous missions. Sergeant Sullivan's heroic actions, perseverance, and flying experience contributed to the success of these dangerous aerial missions and reflect great credit upon himself, the United States Air Force, and the military service.

XV—ARMY COMMENDATION MEDAL. By direction of the Secretary of the Army, under the provisions of paragraph 33, AR 672-5-1, the Army Commendation Medal with "V" device for heroism is awarded posthumously to:

Captain Joseph I. Machowski, A031303931, United States Air Force, distinguished himself by heroism on 28 July 1965 while engaged in military operations against a hostile force in the Republic of Vietnam. As a pilot of United States military aircraft, Captain Machowski supported a military operation against the Viet Cong with outstanding effectiveness. He provided ground elements with timely information and made low passes over the hostile position to mark targets for airstrikes. When he saw a Vietnamese unit withdrawing from the battle, noticed American advisors bringing up the rear and knowing that one of the advisors was wounded, and also observed the Viet Cong leaving their well-entrenched positions and pursuing the withdrawing unit, he exposed himself to the intense hostile gun fire and made low passes over the insurgents, firing his weapon at them. Through his professional skill, indomitable courage, and complete disregard for his own safety, the American advisors were able to rejoin their unit and to assist the friendly Vietnamese unit in a safe withdrawal. Captain Machowski's heroic conduct in this hazardous situation reflects distinct credit upon himself, the United States Air Force, and the armed forces of his country.

XVI—ARMY COMMENDATION MEDAL. By direction of the Secretary of the Army, under the provisions of paragraph 33, AR 672-5-1, the Army Commendation Medal with "V" Device for heroism is awarded to:

Captain Robert J. Herculson, Jr., FR58764, United States Air Force, distinguished himself by heroism while serving with the 524th Tactical Fighter Squadron, attached to Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 3d Brigade, 1st Infantry Division on 12 November 1965 in the Republic of Vietnam. On this date, Captain Herculson was flying forward air control in support of 1st Division units engaged in combat at Ap Bau Bang. He observed three separate attacks on armored personnel carriers by hostile recoilless rifle fire. From Captain Herculson's normal controlling altitude of 1,500 feet, the source of the fire could not be pinpointed. Disregarding his personal safety, Captain Herculson descended to an altitude of 50 feet in order to locate the weapon crew's exact position. During this maneuver his aircraft sustained direct hits from small arms fire. Despite the damage, he climbed to his original altitude and directed fighter aircraft into the gun position. The strike was a complete success. In addition, Captain Herculson directed fighters against a mortar emplacement and a village. Following the fighters' departure, armed Viet Cong were observed fleeing from the ruined village. He again descended and engaged the insurgents with an M-16 rifle. Two of the Viet Cong were observed to be hit in this action. Captain Herculson's actions are in keeping with the finest traditions of the military service and reflect great credit upon himself, the 1st Infantry Division, the United States Army, and the United States Air Force.
