Two troops reacted immediately, forming a cordon around the trapped enemy. The men of the 3D SQUADRON, 5TH CAVALRY, launched two valiant assaults against the contained communist forces, but the cornered foe fought stubbornly and darkness prevented a rout of the entrenched enemy. When daybreak came, Troops A and B feinted forward, enabling the men of Troop B to sweep into the village. The heroic efforts of the cavalrymen killed 233 and captured 44 of the 300-man enemy force. The men of the 3D SQUADRON, 5TH CAVALRY displayed extraordinary heroism and devotion to duty which are in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service and reflect distinct credit upon themselves and the Armed Forces of the United States.

30 January 1968. American positions were initially battered by a continuous barrage of hostile mortar, recoilless rifle, antitank, and small arms fire which enabled the aggressors to penetrate primary defense positions and threaten the annihilation of the entire contingent. Due entirely to an alert and unanimous response, BATTERY B proved instrumental in halting the onslaught through effective close combat artillery shelling. Those not manning the howitzers were courageously resupplying a vital self-illumination gun or pursuing enemy soldiers moving between the primary defense line and the unit's perimeter. During this six-hour engagement, no one sought shelter despite the tremendous dangers inherent in a vicious firefight of this magnitude. Through their outstanding composure under trying circumstances, brilliant technical skill and exceptional display of gallantry, the men of the battery contributed materially to the free world struggle against Communist aggression in the Republic of Vietnam. Despite intense sniper fire, the road was cleared and evacuation accomplished in an exemplary manner. Under similar circumstances on 13 March, another convoy was hit by ambushers. This time the enemy split the vehicle formation and overran its forward section, killing all officers. Only quick and heroic fighting by the 585TH ENGINEER COMPANY prevented the entire convoy from extermination. Initially the attack was so fierce that evacuation helicopters could not land near the zone for nearly an hour. The battalion-size ambush was the largest of the war to that date and the ensuing firefight left forty-eight enemy dead. Again a relief convoy was formed and seven hours later the courageous defenders were evacuated. Through their personal display of gallantry, devotion to duty and remarkable perseverance, the unit contributed immeasurably to the free world support effort in the Republic of Vietnam.
