GENERAL ORDERS No. 29 HEADQUARTERS
DEPARTMENT OF THE ARMY
Washington, DC, 5 June 1970

AWARD OF THE MEDAL OF HONOR

Lieutenant Colonel Charles C. Rogers,

, Field Artillery, United

By direction of the President, under the Joint Resolution of Congress approved 12 July 1862 (amended by act of 3 March 1863, act of 9 July 1918 and act of 25 July 1963), the Medal of Honor for conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity at the risk of life above and beyond the call of duty is awarded by the Department of the Army in the name of Congress to:

the fire support base was subjected to a concentrated bombardment of heavy mortar, rocket and rocket-propelled grenade fire. Simultaneously the position was struck by a human wave ground assault, lead by sappers who breached the defensive barriers with bangalore torpedoes and penetrated the defensive perimeter. Colonel Rogers with complete disregard for his own safety moved through the hail of fragments from bursting enemy rounds to the embattled tion. Colonel Rogers moved to the threatened area and directed lethal fire on the enemy forces. Seeing a howitzer inoperative due to casualties, Colonel Rogers joined the surviving members of the crew to return the howitzer to action. While directing the position defense, Colonel Rogers was seriously wounded by fragments from a heavy mortar round which exploded on the penetrated the howitzer positions. Although painfully wounded a second time during the assault. Colonel Rogers pressed the attack killing several of the parapet of the gun position. Although too severely wounded to physically lead the defenders, Colonel Rogers continued to give encouragement and direction to his men in the defeating and repelling of the enemy attack. Colonel Rogers' dauntless courage and heroism inspired the defenders of the fire support base to the heights of valor to defeat a determined and numerically superior enemy force. His relentless spirit of aggressiveness, conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity in action at the risk of his own life above and beyond the call of duty are in the highest traditions of the military service and reflect great credit upon him, his unit and the United States Army.
